LEGION PICTURED AS LINK BETWEEN VETERAN AND JOB

Post-war Care of Soldiers
Impossible Without Organization, Speaker Says

"There are 62,000 mental and nervous disability cases in the United States at the present time due directly or indirectly to the war," James Burns, state vice officer of the American Legion told members of Oney Johnston post and the legion auxiliary Monday night at a meeting in Elk hall.

Because of these cases, and all other disability cases arising out of the war work of rehabilitation in which the American Legion is carrying on is extremely important. In a general review of the service work done in Wisconsin, Mr. Burns explained that the United States is divided into five areas and Wisconsin is in Area D. Rehabilitation is taken in the broadest sense of the word and it includes everything from compensation and hospitalization to getting jobs for veterans.

A national committee works with the state committee to carry on the service work, which Mr. Burns said was one answer to the question, Why the American Legion? Wisconsin veterans should have no difficulty in reaching rating boards or service offices for practically three-fifths of all the people live within a hundred miles of one or the other. In many instances transportation is provided veterans to government hospitals and local hospitalization is provided in cases of emergencies arising in service connected cases.

GET LEGISLATION
Rehabilitation includes the securing of the necessary legislation for the veterans. In speaking of the work the legion has accomplished in that field, Mr. Burns said, 97 per cent of the legislation which congress has enacted that is favorable to the world war veterans has been brought about through the influence of the American Legion.

The 11,000 posts throughout the country have made possible the government hospitals, Mr. Burns said. Not only does the American Legion do its rehabilitation work by means of hospitalization, by securing legislation and compensation but also fills the gap between the hospital and the job.

One way in which this is done by means of the American Legion camp at Tomahawk lake. The camp is open to any veteran and is free but for

LAWRENCE GRADUATE GIVEN HIGH HONORS

Miss Constance Raymaker, Green Bay, graduate of Lawrence college in 1927, has been nominated for a fellowship at Northwestern university which carries free tuition and cash awards of $500. Miss Raymaker was a member of Pi Gamma Mu, national social science honorary society, and Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity, while she was at Lawrence college.

Sergeant Earl Vandebogart of the police department is confined to his home by illness. Officer Earl Thomas will take Vandebogart's place at the desk during his absence.

Men who are receiving compensation or wish to pay, the maximum charge is 80 cents a day. For the past two years the camp operated under the budget allowance, Mr. Burns reported.

Child welfare work is another of the activities of the legion. The importance of the American Legion auxiliary was emphasized in connection with this work. Forty-two children are being cared for in Wisconsin and there is an average expenditure of about $350 a month. The child welfare fund is not only for orphans but for those children whose parents are incapacitated.

In reviewing the service work of the legion Mr. Burns commented on the indifference of the public to disabled veterans. This indifference is explained, however, by the absence of soldiers selling pencils on the streets or begging from house to house as was done after the civil war.

A plea for larger membership in both the American Legion and the auxiliary concluded the thirty minute talk. About 225 persons were present at the meeting.

LETTER GOLF

MAKING ENDS MEET

Playing the stock market isn't the only way to go from GAIN to LOSE in a hurry. It's just as easy—and much more fun—in letter golf. Par is five, according to the solution on page 11, but you may be able to beat it.

G	A	I	N

THE RULES

- 1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change Cow to Hen, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
- 2—You can change only one letter of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
- 3—You must have a complete word, at a time.
- 4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

CITY WINS $25,000 DAMAGE SUIT TAKEN TO SUPREME COURT

High Tribunal Reverses Decision of Trial Overruling
City's Demurrer

The city of Appleton won a victory in the state supreme court Tuesday morning when the verdict of Judge Edgar V. Werner overruling the city's demurrer in the $25,000 damage suit started by Mrs. Lucinda Calvert, Appleton, was reversed.

The city's demurrer to Mrs. Calvert's complaint stated the court had no jurisdiction, the plaintiff did not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action and the action was not started within the time specified by law. The court overruled the demurrer and the city appealed.

Mrs. Calvert charged she fractured her hip and was otherwise injured when she tripped over an iron pipe extending from the sidewalk on W. College-ave, near Oneida-st., on Nov. 4, 1926.

Mrs. Pauline Peterson, Appleton lost her appeal in the state supreme court today of the damage case in which she sought $10,000 and which went to jury that she was ordered to pay $140 court costs.

The Outagamie circuit court ordered her to pay the costs incurred against Emil Smejkal and the General Casualty Company of Wisconsin which had insured his car against accident. She suffered severe injuries when the car in which she was as a friend of the Smejkal family, was riding when it was ditched near Cecil.

ONLY ONE OBJECTION TO SEWER ASSESSMENT

Only one property owner in the upper fourth ward, where sewers will be installed this summer, objected to the assessment of benefits and damages at a meeting of the board of public works Monday afternoon at the city hall. The meeting was well attended by property holders from the district but most of them were satisfied with the proposed sewers and the assessments.

POLICE CATCH AUTOIST GOING 35 MILES AN HOUR

Harvey Krueger, 902 W. Oklahomast, was fined $10 and costs by Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court Tuesday morning, when he pleaded guilty of speeding. Krueger was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Gus Henserkorn for traveling 35 miles an hour on W. Wisconsin-ave Sunday afternoon.

FIRST GRASS FIRE EASILY EXTINGUISHED

The first grass fire of the season resulted in a call for the fire department at 12:30 Tuesday afternoon. The blaze was on W. Rogers-ave and was easily extinguished without serious damage.

In the court of origin the argument centered around the condition of the car and the cause for it leaving the road.

The accident occurred on Sept. 15, 1926. Mrs. Peterson charged Smejkal's negligent and careless driving was responsible for the accident.

REGISTERING CAUSE OF DELAY AT POLLS

Voters Required to Wait Until Question of Law Is Decided Before Getting Ballot

Appleton voters who did not register previous to closing of the registration period last week were the cause of no little trouble to election clerks and the city clerk's office Tuesday morning. In some instances voters were denied the right to vote, until the law on the question was settled.

If you haven't registered and wish to vote, an affidavit that the petitioner is a qualified elector, together with a petition from two free holders that they know the petitioner to be a qualified voter must be filed with the election clerk. If the affidavits are filed out at the polling booth, the election inspectors are allowed to act as the notary public before whom each of the affidavits must be filed. After the affidavits are filed the petitioner can register and then receive his ballots and vote.

CITY NOT READY TO ENFORCE PARKING LAW

Appleton's 30-minute parking law on College-ave probably will not be enforced for another month, according to city hall officials. It is not believed there is need for enforcement of the law at the present time and a resolution from the city council is necessary before enforcement will be started.

There also is a question about additional men for the police department so that the new ordinance can be enforced. Whether the fire and police commission and the city council will sanction an increase in the police force remains to be ascertained.

INVITE BUSINESSMEN TO MADISON MEETING

Madison—(AP)—Business men all over the state are invited to attend a conference, in Madison, April 30, sponsored by the University of Wisconsin School of Commerce for the purpose of discussing problems of the business world.

The projected business conference will be the first of its kind to be held for many years.

Between 400 and 500 invitations will be mailed to officers of state business associations.

Discussion will center around three general topics. In the morning, the topic will be "The Interdependence of Wisconsin Business Interests," that of the afternoon session "Wisconsin Prosperity," and at an evening banquet, "Business Research," will be discussed.

The list of speakers is not yet complete, but it will consist, for the most part, of Wisconsin men.

ENGINEER'S BOND IS FOR CASH, EQUIPMENT Does Not Cover Errors or Mistakes in Judgment Official May Have Made

The bond which city engineers take out when they assume the duties of their office does not cover errors or mistakes which might occur while these men are in office, it was stated by city hall officials Friday in answer to a recent communication with reference to the so-called error in laying a sewer on Badger-ave in the Fifth ward. A city engineer's bond covers those assets which he may collect in office and the equipment which belongs to the city and for which he is responsible.

The communication in which the city officials were asked why the surety company could not be forced to pay the cost of rectifying any errors which an engineer might make also called attention to the trouble encountered at the Wilson junior high school with reference to drainage. One of the aldermen who was alderman at the time the school was built, was of the opinion that originally the drainage pipes in Wilson school were to have drained into the Mason-st sewer and that the poor drainage was partly the result of changed plans.

Never Was Unlawful To Write Checks Under $1

Washington, D. C.—It never was unlawful to issue a bank check in an amount less than $1, according to a statement made by the department of justice. In view of the revival of the idea that checks in such small amounts are unlawful the department has republished a memorandum prepared some 12 years ago, for the guidance of government attorneys on the point. It explained, however, that the law which gave rise to the idea was passed in 1909 and never did apply to bank checks.

Following is the full text of the department's statement: "There have been received at the department of justice newspaper clippings reviving the idea that it is unlawful to issue a bank check for a sum less than $1.

QUESTION OFTEN RAISED

The records of the department show that during the past 15 years this question has been raised from time to time and efforts have been made to obtain a uniform from the department on the subject. The department does not give opinions except under the direction of the president, or on the request of the other executive departments of the government. About 12 years ago a memorandum was made in the department for the information of inquiring government attorneys, giving a history of the matter, which disclosed that in 1909 a law was passed by congress as follows:

"No person shall make, issue, circulate or pay out any rate check, memorandum, token or other obligation for a less sum than one dollar to circulate as money or to be received or used in lieu of lawful money of the United States; and every person so offending shall be fined not more than $500, and imprisoned not more than six months, or both."

The history of this legislation, the records show is that it was a re-enactment of Section 3533 of the Revised Statutes of 1878, which in turn was a re-enactment of a law of July 17, 1862, and hence the law had been in force for many years. The law in its origin grew out of a practice which obtained back in 1862, when there was in use "fractional currency," commonly known as "private circulation," issued by private banks and corporations, and to some extent by individuals, and it was this currency, often issued in sums less than one dollar, that the statute made it unlawful to issue and circulate.

In the department memorandum the point is emphasized that a bank check is not intended to circulate as money, or to be received or used in lieu of lawful money, but is merely an order for the payment of money.

The statute does not and never did apply to ordinary bank checks.

CITY ASSESSOR GETS BUSY ON 1928 WORK

Sends Cards to Auto Owners Asking Description of Their Cars

The first steps in the 1928 assessment of personal property were taken by the city assessor this week when a clerk started addressing cards which will be sent to a number of owners asking for detailed descriptions of their cars. The cards will not be mailed out, however, until May 1 and are to be returned by June 1.

Automobile owners, probably will save themselves in the assessment considerable trouble if they fill out the cards, they are sent at the time. Every year at this time the assessor's office is flooded with requests to have the records changed to use the description of a car for correct. In practice all cases, the protesters are persons who first of all had a 1927 model car, which they sold out that it was from 1926 or 1925. Nearly 90 per cent of the total of tax returns this winter will be the result of incorrect descriptions of cars.

MENASHA MERCHANTS
FAVOR PLANS FOR
SATURDAY CLOSING

Withhold Final Action Until
Other Valley Cities Make Decisions

Menasha—Saturday evening plan for closing stores which is being threshed out in neighboring cities, met with almost unanimous favor at a meeting of merchants and business men at the Elks club Monday evening providing other cities, Appleton, Oshkosh and Neenah, adopt it. H. L. Coar, vice president of the Merchants association, presided and about 25 business places were represented.

The proposed plan provides for keeping the stores open Friday evening and closing at 6 o'clock Saturday evening. A few of the merchants favored giving it a trial and if it did not work out satisfactorily to get back to the present plan.

After a thorough discussion of the matter it was decided to wait and see what action will be taken at the Valley meeting Friday night and at the coming meetings at Appleton and Oshkosh before taking definite steps. It is possible a joint meeting between the cities will be arranged later.

The matter of holding a bargain day again this season was also left open. Before that is definitely decided, a committee will call on the merchants to see if the necessary financial support can be secured. The dates suggested were Friday, May 18, or Saturday, May 19. The organization of a chamber of commerce was informally discussed, but the city was too small to swing so expensive a proposition.

Mr. Comiskey, a personal friend, said he hoped the chief would find many opportunities to watch the White Sox play.

Reed Says Voters Should Pay
More Attention to Their Government

Menasha—Missouri Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, who was scheduled to speak at the public triangle at 3:45 Monday afternoon did not arrive until 4:20 and found a crowd of about 200 persons, a portion of whom were mill men returning from work, waiting for him.

He was introduced by Mayor N. G. Remmel. On account of the lateness of the hour and the fact that he was to speak at Green Bay Monday evening he confined his talk to about ten minutes. He urged voters to take more part in the federal government and said that if they would give it as much attention as they did to the baseball record of Babe Ruth we would have a different kind of government.

The speaker said he would not take time to go into any of the issues of the campaign, but touched briefly on the oil scandal and gave a brief sketch of its history. He urged the necessity of voters selecting "washington men to represent them in the nation and also urged them to go to the polls and cast their ballot on election day.

ICE FLOES FROM LAKE
DAMAGE GOVERNMENT DAM

Neenah—The government dam was badly damaged Monday by ice which started down river during the morning. Huge floes broke loose in the dam, caused by the east wind which continued all day and caused the ice to pile up against the south abutment of the dam, breaking them off like needles. All gates are open to guard against the high water due to the ice starting to melt. The east wind has piled the honeycombed ice upon the west shore in great heaps, endangering property south of the city limits.

SCHOOL CHILDREN
IN GOOD HEALTH

Board of Education Hears
Monthly Report of School
Nurse at Its Meeting

Neenah—Seven hundred tons of coal at $7.09 a ton, were purchased for schools from the Home Fuel company, by the board of education at its Monday evening meeting.

The board met in monthly session at Kimberly high school office. The monthly report of the school nurse showed that the general health of the pupils was above the average at this time of the year. Colds and laryngitis have kept several children from their studies. There were a few cases of chickenpox, all at St. Patrick school. At a committee meeting of the anti-tuberculosis association, sponsored by the Economic club, chest clinics to be held here this year were discussed. A clinic will be held in the Twin Cities for two days with three doctors for each city. The milk diet for school children will be discontinued after Easter, the report said. One hundred and six children were weighed and measured, 17 of whom were 10 per cent or more underweight.

YOUNGSTER SAVES
CHINA FROM RIOTS

14-year-old Youth Stops Red
Uprising by Informing Police

Canton, China—(AP)—A 14-year-old street urchin Tuesday was credited with having saved Canton from further bloodshed through a communist uprising. He informed police that the Reds were intending to precipitate a revolution similar to that of last December when they seized control of the city, held it for a few days and were ousted with a large loss of life.

Under the leadership of the youth, the police were shown 18 Red strongholds. Jailing these, the officers arrested 464 communists.

Two hundred and thirty persons, including eight women, were executed. The victims died gladly, saying that ten more Reds would rise up where one was slain down.

Large quantities of communistic literature were confiscated along with grenades, arms and ammunition. Also 25,000 Red neckties, similar to those worn in the December uprising by the communists, were seized.

The youth said he had learned of the communist plans from overhearing the various groups of them talking in the streets. The Reds openly predicted the downfall of the government and threatened to use the torch to precipitate trouble.

Madison—(AP)—While candidates for election as delegates to the political party national conventions await the outcome of Tuesday's election, the secretary of state is filing away their statements of expenses incurred during the campaign. A preliminary statement was filed by all candidates last Saturday, and a final statement must be filed this Saturday.

The law requires that such statements be placed in the mails Saturday, so all expenses had not been recorded with the secretary of state late Monday.

The LaFollette Progressive delegate candidates filed individual expense accounts, as did many of the Democrats and the group seeking election to the Republican convention uninstructed.

One general expense statement filed for the uninstructed Republican group by the state central committee showed a total of $18,571.90 spent, unpaid bills of $1,201.04, and $5,000 borrowed from a Milwaukee bank.

How To Play Bridge

By Milton C. Work

This week we shall vary somewhat our method of presenting Declarer's problems and will give the complete play of the first trick; how, should the Declarer plan to play the following hand with Spades the contract?

The play to the first trick was:

To trick 2, West leads the Ten of Clubs.

DECLARER'S PLAN OF CAMPAIGN
Declarer has lost one trick and, if East have a Spade, must lose the second.

SPRING EXODUS OF
STUDENTS UNDERWAY

Special Trains and Busses
Needed to Take University
Students to Homes

Madison—(AP)—The University student quarter is being deserted today. Another spring vacation has started the big parade.

With the closing of classes come a period of leisure for the married student. But the happiness is marred by the no-out rule prevalent "on the hill." Those who crave a longer vacation and take it without the permission of one of the deans are just out of luck, for the credits for the semester are docked.

Railroad and bus companies were ready for the big rush. One road is running two special trains to Chicago, two to Milwaukee and one to Green Bay and the Fox River valley, while the bus companies, with the approval of the state railroad commission, have initiated a special "spring vacation" rate between Milwaukee and Madison.

Easter will see the cooed joyous in her new spring finery, which will be brought back to Madison to make the hill attractive to certain male students who will grow listless with the coming of spring.

Vacation marks the first interim in studies of any importance so far this semester, and will probably be celebrated accordingly. Parties, dances, bridge-luncheons, teas and other social functions are planned for those who are not on the way to homes in Wisconsin and nearby states, and for those who return to school early.

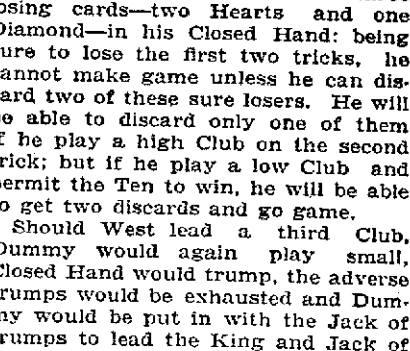

The railroad station platforms in Madison were jammed throughout the day as the students piled traveling bags, almost uniformly marked with the red Wisconsin seal or pendant, on the baggage trucks. Taxicabs did a rushing business as the women students stopped for a last-minute dash of powder and nearly missed the trains and as colleagues made last minute farewells to fraternity brothers or professors with whom some last-minute academic task was appointed.

For those who must stay here during the cessation of classes some of the churches have made special Easter plans. An Easter breakfast will be given by the young people of the Baptist church. The First Congregational is giving a special service at 9:30 Sunday morning to which students have been invited. They have also been extended special invitations by other churches.

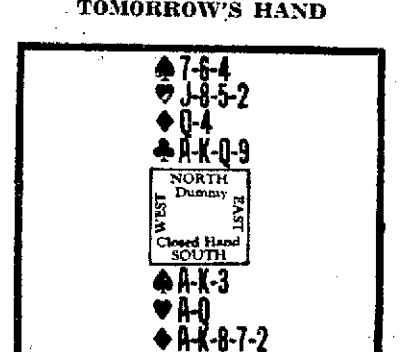

and whether he plays a high Club from Dummy or a low one. East's play of the Queen of Clubs shows that he has no more Clubs and unless West holds all four of the adverse trumps, which is not probable, East would trump this trick if Declarer should play an honor from Dummy. A Declarer has a total of nine trumps, including the four tops, forcing a trump from the East hand would not gain anything. Declarer has three losing cards—two Hearts and one Diamond—in his Closed Hand; being sure to lose the first two tricks, he cannot make game unless he can discard two of these sure losers. He will be able to discard only one of them if he play a high Club on the second trick; but if he play a low Club and permit the Ten to win, he will be able to get two discards and go game.

Should West lead a third Club, Dummy would again play small. Closed Hand would be exhausted and Dummy would be put in with the Jack of trumps to lead the King and Jack of Clubs on which Declarer would obtain his two discards. If West led either Hearts or Diamonds, Declarer's play would be even more simple.

TOMORROW'S HAND

No Trump contract; South declarer. The play to the first trick follows:

How should Declarer plan his campaign? Answer tomorrow.

THE RIGHT TO A JOB
There is enough unemployment in the land to be quite severely felt in the big cities and to raise the all important question of what is to be done to avoid its cruel consequences, what can be done, what should be done by any intelligent and progressive government.
A man with a family has assumed an obligation. When it is necessary to feed mouths, clothe bodies, provide schooling, pay on the indebtedness on a home, the loss of employment is a serious thing. When it continues for any substantial length of time it becomes more than that.
Aside from the relatively short time of the collapse following the war period the United States has been by far the most favored nation in the world. Although its wages were substantially higher than wages in countries maintaining about the same degree of civilization its business and employment went along at a fairly good rate. For years European nations, and England particularly, have felt the pangs of unemployment as they were probably never felt before.

European newspapers seem to take some relish out of our unemployment figures. They have been explaining or trying to explain for so long their own deplorable condition in comparison with our prosperous one that it may be natural to pick up any unfortunate circumstance that seems to fall to the destiny of the United States.

But the real question is: What are we going to do about it? Are we to stand idly by or is there something that can and should be done? The Charity Organization Society of New York has declared that in eleven years it has not had such a large demand upon its services and resources. Governor Smith of that state immediately stepped out in a constructive manner and advised that all state and municipal works either in process of development or about to be developed should be immediately speeded up so that the employment to be given by such enterprises might be largely increased and tend to fill the gap. That suggestion of Governor Smith raises the question whether or not the vast works of public improvement that are constantly going on either at the direction of the municipalities, the state governments or the federal government, might not be so employed as to control or help to control the steady and constant employment of people. It might be more difficult to do that in northern states where the work must be, because of weather conditions, more or less seasonal. It would seem to be an entirely practical thing in the states below the Mason and Dixon line.

And yet there is a larger question involved. Is it not possible and practical to evolve a sensible plan so that employment might be kept at a more steady figure and the wastes, pains and cruelties of unemployment be minimized, or must employment be left like a mighty river overflowing its banks with the spring freshets and leaving a dry and useless bed at other seasons? Is there no dam that can be inserted whereby the flow can be steadied?

Until the beginning of President Wilson's administration in 1913 when the Federal Reserve Bank was established we had much the same hurtful conditions surrounding the business of banking and through that business affecting every other business. The Federal Reserve Bank principle may or may not be applicable to the question of general employment and yet were it so applicable and were it applied it would tend to remove the hardships that come with unemployment. Divested of many details the federal reserve system of banking has merely established a vast reservoir in the form of a federal reserve bank located at a principal point in the various districts into which the country is divided to provide necessary funds when some single spot or spots in that district, due to conditions that may have affected them only, became in need. It has stood the test of time well and in the last fifteen years it has been able to prevent the financial stringency that every now and then, theretofore, affected the country.

In the first place we have no accurate means of ascertaining the amount of unemployment. It is purely a matter of guess work and the estimates range all the way from five to ten per cent of those generally engaged in occupations, much too high a percentage for the country's good.

Professor S. H. Schlichter writing in the New Republic, has gathered what appears to be somewhat reliable statistics by which he seeks to measure both production and employment. He calls attention to the significant fact that while the output has increased the employment has actually declined which is either a compliment to the efficiency of the workers or must be ascribed to the power of improved machinery. He asserts that during the first ten months of 1927 factory employment fell five per cent while at the same time the factories turned out seven per cent more goods. This might be a natural result because competition in business has become keener and profits substantially smaller.

The ability of the country was directed through many years of effort and discussion at the problem of keeping the banking business steady which in turn aided materially in keeping other businesses steady. The result appears to have been accomplished through the federal reserve banking system which involves all national banks and such of the state banks as care to join it. Why should this same ability not be employed in as great, if not a greater endeavor considering the human elements involved, to the accomplishment of the purpose of abolishing any substantial unemployment? A man's right to work, to his job, should not in a civilized country depend upon the mere whims of uncertainty, not if it can be controlled by governmental checks and balances. It is a problem for statesmanship. Any effort to solve it should be encouraged. A practical solution of it would be a nation wide blessing.

TRAINED FOR LEISURE
Frequently in the criticism by Europeans of Americans the phrase has been employed that Americans have no conception of how to employ leisure. Whether or not the criticism has been deserved, the increasing leisure of Americans is making a knowledge of how to employ it so necessary that it is beginning to assume importance in the eyes of prominent educators. Dr. Thomas Stockham Baker, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, observes in his annual report to the board of trustees that training students to employ profitably their hours of leisure, as well as to earn a living, is the problem facing education of the future.

The increasing mechanization of our manner of working and living has the effect of shortening the working day and increasing the amount of leisure at the disposal of the individual. Dr. Baker points out in presenting his theory, and that while it seems inconsistent with the present strenuous mood of the busy American to think of education for leisure, the soundness of this principle will become more obvious as time goes on.

Specialization has so narrowed the activities, interests and vision of modern man that it is becoming increasingly necessary to purposely develop in him other interests to balance and relieve the concentrated development in his line of specialization. In short, the desirability of a liberal education increases in proportion as the vocation becomes more specialized.

This is becoming very widely recognized, and as Dr. Baker points out, the time is rapidly approaching when the problem must be met and dealt with in the institutions of education.

DULL CHILDREN
The Federal Department of Education, in a recent bulletin, emphasizes anew the importance of giving every school child periodic physical examinations.
It points out that many a supposedly "dull" pupil merely has poor eyes and can't see the blackboard plainly. Many a well-meaning youngster incurs the wrath of the teacher for inattention when he really has defective hearing and can't tell what she says to him.

These are real tragedies for the children involved. Every city and village owes it to its children to see that such things don't happen.

NOW IS THE TIME THE SAP RUNS
In the spring the blooming beecher oozes moisture by the heck. I wouldn't complain about this, only that the sap, the poor sap with chronic rhinitis harasses one so unbearably with his reiteration of the, to him, unanswerable conundrum: Why do I stuff up and run every time I get my feet wet or encounter a cold draft?
The dentists claim, with ample evidence, that the most prevalent human disease is dental caries, decay of teeth. Some persons might think of constipation as a contender for this bad eminence, but to my mind constipation is not a disease at all, just a bad habit. It is my belief that chronic rhinitis is a good second to dental caries in the list of human disease conditions, at least in America. The dentists say that it is excessively rare to find a human mouth with no sign of dental caries—one of their guild recently asserted that only four persons in the United States have perfect teeth, or something like that. In like manner, one might assert that there are not enough people in North America with perfectly normal noses to gather the news with which this announcement is surrounded. Seriously a doctor with the habit of looking into a matter closely before making his guess, rarely indeed enjoys a look at a normal set of turbinates, adenoids, sinuses and whatnot. Even persons presuming well, who come under the physician's observation for periodic health examination or for insurance or other test, almost uniformly present abnormalities in the nasal cavities. It seems that our civilized life goes hand with the lining of the upper respiratory tract. It isn't the heat so much as it is the lack of proper humidity.

Just around the next corner there is probably a lot of knowledge waiting to be found, new knowledge, or a new application or correlation of knowledge we already have in scattered fragments. Right now, however, we can only speculate, and I am fond of the conception of Dr. John B. Todd, Syracuse physician savant, who suggests that the essential difference between "fresh air" and "foul air" or "stale air" of "stagnant air" may be a question of the amount of vitamin in the air. The very idea of a vitamin in air is original with this medical natural scientist. Of course we are all aware that the ultraviolet ray or energy of sunlight imparts to food substances their vitamin value. I mention this mere hypothesis here in order to set the thoughtful reader thinking and if possible to make fresh air more popular. Most intelligent people know that cooking and prolonged storage or preservation of fruits and vegetables destroys vitamins. It may be that overheating has a similar effect on fresh air.

This is the season when chronic rhinitis manifests itself more than it does in any other season, simply because right now the poor sap is at the ragged and ragged edge.
If your upper respiratory lining membrane is so very sensitive to trifles such as drafts, wet feet and going without your heavy wraps, you should snap out of it, and have your chronic rhinitis treated by the doctor, instead of grouching about our weather, climate and so on.

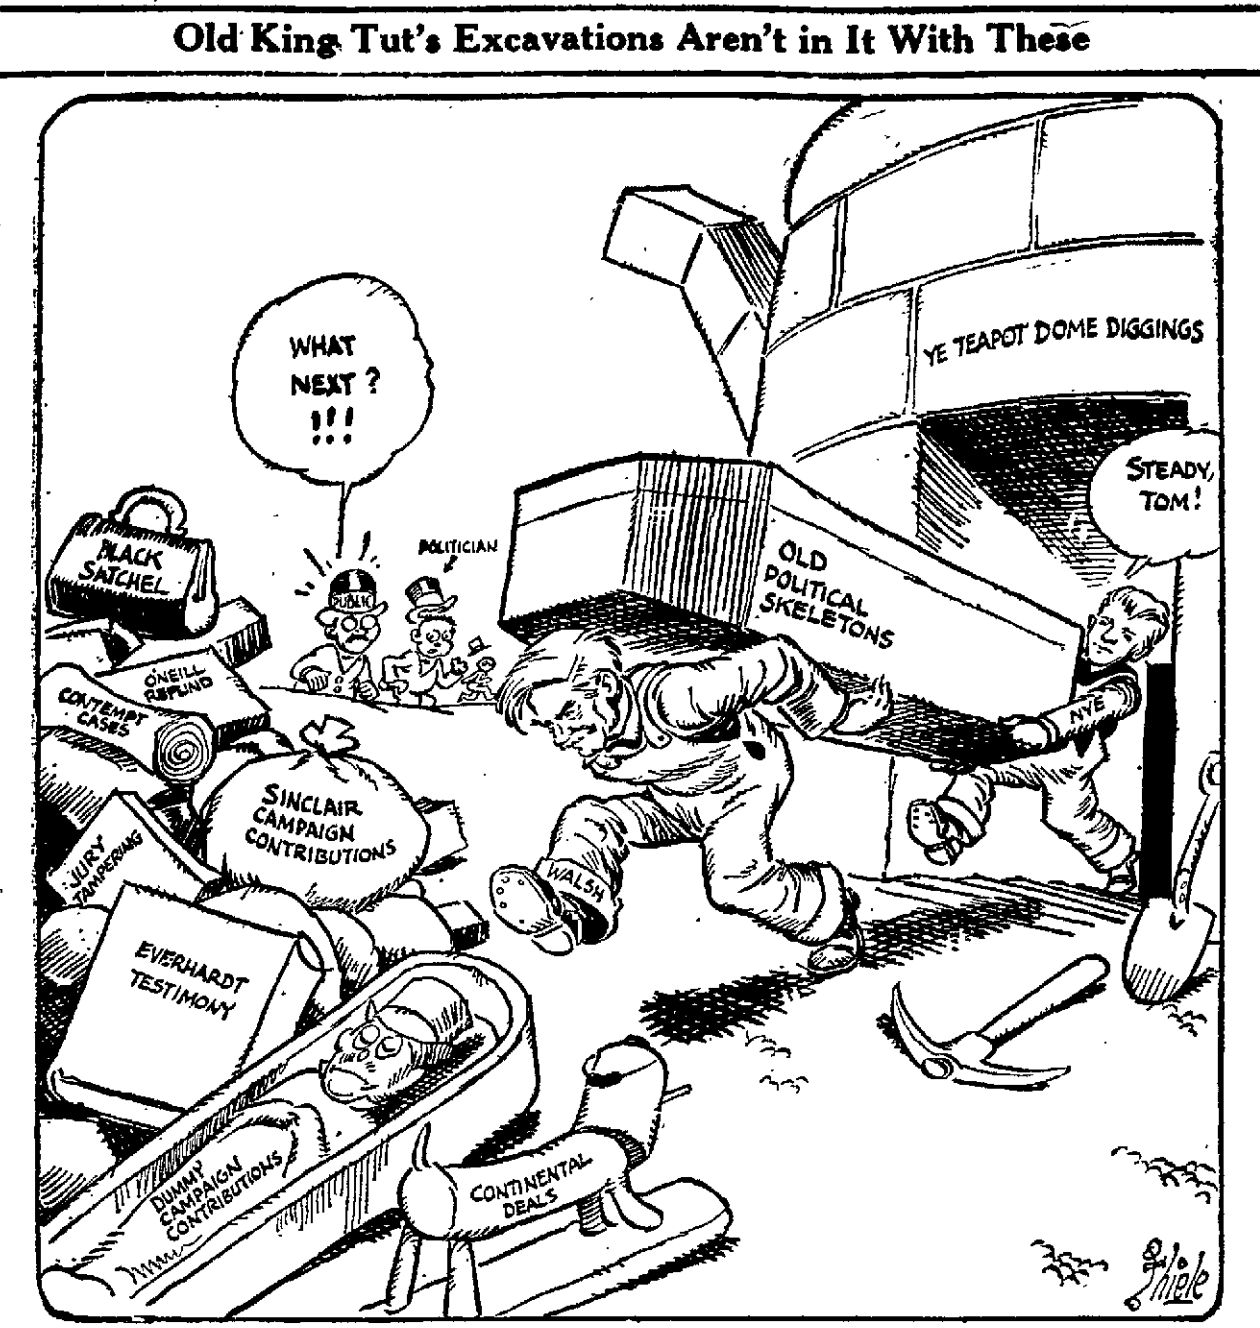

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Odor From Drain
Please tell me what disinfectant to use in the drain pipes from the lavatories, etc. The company that installed them and connected them with the sewer insists there cannot possibly be any foul odor, so I can get no help from them. (W. E. M.)
Answer—Perhaps a can of lye left in the drain pipe overnight will clear up the trouble. All plumbers insist that if there is a proper trap in the drain pipe no foul odor can escape. The ordinary lye commonly used for clearing out grease, etc., is as efficient as any other disinfectant for drains.
Old Fashioned Molasses
Recently you said a few firms still furnish old fashioned molasses without the brimstone flavor. I have tried to find some, but in vain. Merchants look as though a customer asking for such a thing is queer. (L. E. M.)
Answer—Nevertheless several firms market old fashioned molasses, and the flavor of this brings back fond recollections of the halcyon days when a feller could, when very good, have brown sugar on his bread and butter, or on gala occasions, even a dish of molasses to dip it in. Send a stamped envelope bearing your address for the name of the firm that markets the old fashioned molasses. My notion of refined cruelty is to mention pancakes with old fashioned molasses, or worse yet, fried corn meal mush besmeared with old fashioned molasses, aloud toward 4 p. m. Monday, to a faithful member of the Bread and Milk Club.

Malarial Country
I am thinking of starting a cattle ranch in the region known as the old south. The business will take me over six months and through growing timber. How can I avoid the plague, malaria, which I understand comes from the bite of a mosquito in that section? (F. R. J.)
Answer—For temporary protection, as during a visit or while traveling through malarial country, one may escape malaria by taking daily 10 grains of quinine, in one dose at night, or in divided doses spread over the 24 hours. For permanent protection, it is necessary to drain the land near your residence, oil all standing water that cannot be drained, and make use of screens to exclude the mosquitoes at night, when they get in most of their wicked incursion.

LOOKING BACKWARD
TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
Tuesday, April 7, 1903
An influenza epidemic caused the death rate in Chicago to exceed that of any March since 1895. Grover Cleveland was to visit James H. Eckels in his summer home at Oconomowoc, that summer. Navigation was to open the following Friday and the four bridge towers of the city were instructed to report for duty the following day to get their respective bridges in proper condition for the season.

No reply had been received by the Papermakers union from the mill owners to their ultimatum delivered the previous Friday. If no reply was received by the following Saturday night a strike was imminent.
Automobiles were to be very common in Appleton that summer. It was understood that at least a half dozen were to be owned in this city.

HASKIN WRITES TODAY

DON'T DRIVE ANOTHER'S CAR
Washington, D. C. — Traffic authorities and automobile clubs and associations have long been endeavoring to impress upon automobile owners the fact that it is not wise to pick up pedestrians and give them a free ride. Playing the Good Samaritan in such cases may get a man into a lot of trouble.
In the first place, he may discover that he has picked up extremely undesirable passengers, for there have been numerous instances in which motorists have been robbed by persons to whom they were giving a lift, and not a few in which the motorists have been assaulted and killed. One case in a Southeastern State that attracted wide attention was that in which a mere boy who was picked up by a man and his wife on a rural highway attacked them when the car had reached a lonely spot, killed them both, took all their valuables, dumped the bodies out by the roadside, and sped away with the car.
A less serious possible result of a pick up is that the owner of the car who is doing the friendly turn becomes liable for the safety of his passengers. If he has an accident in which they are injured they may sue him for damages. With a fair chance of getting a judgment, and he is not less liable if he did not really invite them to ride but merely yielded to their importunings.
Accordingly, while it may be selfish to drive along with empty seats in your car, no man who would appreciate a ride, it is a kind of selfishness that is justified by reason of his wisdom, and the warning not to pick up strange passengers has become one of the important and big "don'ts" of motorists.
In a decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in a case originating in Massachusetts indicates another of these "don'ts" — don't drive a car belonging to someone else. You may have an accident and be held responsible for it.
FRIEND WAS ASKED TO DRIVE
In this interesting case a man named Pepper and his wife were leaving Boston in an automobile owned by the husband to drive to Hartford, Conn., and Pepper invited a friend, Jack Morrill, to accompany them. Pepper drove as far as West Brookfield, where they had dinner, and then upon resuming the trip asked Morrill to drive, stating that he, Pepper, was tired.
Morrill took the wheel to oblige his friend, but it appears that he drove a bit recklessly, for there was an accident in which Pepper was killed and Mrs. Pepper badly injured. Later Mrs. Pepper sued Morrill for damages, alleging that he was the agent or servant of the owner of the car and that the accident was caused by his gross negligence in operating the machine, and by the final decision in the case she has a judgment against him for $4000 and costs.
In an action of this kind it was necessary for the plaintiff, Mrs. Pepper, to show that she had exercised due care, and she testified that she had done all the "backseat driving" possible. She said that almost as soon as Morrill had taken the wheels the car began to go faster and faster; that it swerved in and out, and passed other cars repeatedly and seemed to dash from side to side; that his speed in passing cars was at least 50 miles an hour; that she told her husband that Morrill was driving as a mad man; that she shrieked a couple of times when she thought the car was going to turn over and told the defendant to go easy and stop; that they reached a descending grade just before the accident happened, and in going down this grade that she thought she noticed an increase in speed, which caused her to shriek again, and that was the last she knew.
At the place of the accident there was a fork in the road, the turn to the right leading to Ware, and the one to the left to Springfield and on to their destination, Hartford, and just before reaching the fork Pepper called out, "Turn to the left, Jack!" These directions were the husband's last words.
STARTED TO GO TO THE RIGHT
An officer of the state constabulary who arrived on the scene shortly after the accident testified that the evidence indicated that the car had started down the Ware road and had then swerved sharply to the left to take the Springfield road. At the junction of the roads there was a wooden fence, and there were two or three lampposts and a telegraph pole. The car evidently had smashed down one of the posts, gone through the fence, and then veered and sideswiped the other posts and the pole. It was completely wrecked.
The officer testified he had found a woman and two men laid out on the side of the road, one man dead, the other unconscious, and the woman semi-conscious. Other evidence was to the effect that Morrill was unconscious for several days, and upon his recovery his mind was a complete blank as to all that happened after leaving West Brookfield, while Mrs. Pepper had a long and painful sickness and suffered a permanent injury.

DAILY HINTS FOR HEALTH

MOST SCHOOL CHILDREN HAVE NORMAL HEARTS
BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine
A general survey of large numbers of school children indicated that from 1 1/2 to 2 per cent of all children in public schools suffer with disturbances of the heart which are of importance in determining the length of life and the ability of the child to live a satisfactory existence.
This interesting study involved the investigation of 355 children from 2 to 13 years of age who were examined year after year in a private school in New York City.
GIRL'S BEAT HIGHER
As a result of this study of the hearts of normal school children it was shown that girls from 4 to 12 years of age have a more rapid heart beat when lying down than do boys. The rate when standing up is about the same, except from 11 to 12 years of age, when the heart rate for girls is in general higher than that of boys.
The blood pressure when studied did not seem to show any special difference in the two sexes.
An encouraging observation was the fact that heart disturbances appear to be steadily less frequent in children from the age of 2 years to 13 years.
One of the ways in which modern medicine determines disturbances of heart is to listen for unusual sounds or murmurs associated with the heart beat. Some forms of murmur are definitely associated with certain disturbances of the valves.
There are other heart murmurs which appear to be functional or without relationship to any anatomical change in the heart tissue or any change in its ability to carry on its work.
Transient murmurs were found in 6.6 per cent of the children studied, but they were not found in any of them to be of demonstrable significance. That should not be taken to mean that a heart murmur is always of no significance.
STRAIN OF EXERCISES
On the other hand the functional tests of the heart involved a study of exercises, and it was found that some children who became blue on exercise or who became pale or short of breath or unduly tired actually had hearts incapable of carrying on work that was placed upon them.
When the size of the heart was studied in such cases, it was found to be unequal to its task. A heart that is either much smaller or much larger than the average for the size of body concerned needs careful investigation,

See-Sawing On Broadway
By Gilbert Swan
New York — Upon a recent jaunt about town I dropped by the old warehouse that once housed the "hurdy garage," only to find it closed. And then I realized that the day is not far off when spring in New York no longer will be spring.
The sidewalks of New York which already have changed beyond recognition since the gay song was written about them, will never be the same once the last barrel organ has wheezed its final note.
That this day is coming, became more apparent when I looked up the plant where they were once turned out by the dozen, only to find the manufacturers engrossed in making organs for the small movie houses of the nation.
Time was when the "hurdy gurdy garage" was one of Manhattan's unique industries. It was a warehouse where, at the end of the day, hundreds of weary-footed street grinders came and left their stock in trade. Here, if you sat and waited, you would meet the Dede, who could find types made to order for the sketcher's pad and you would see the "ancient mariner" of the curbstone bring in the most asthmatic hang-organ to be found under the sun.
They tell me that at the present moment there are not more than 100 organ grinders left in the business, whereas there were at least a thousand wandering the streets a few years ago.
It is doubtful if even a hundred are left. Within a few years they may have joined the Dede, and spring will no longer be spring in New York.
Theres a fellow who appears each day in the Broadway belt, wearing a uniform that closely duplicates that of a ships steward. To a "select few" he gives the information that he's off on a boat and can fix you up with ships Scotch, or what-will-you. And he gets away with it! A rouser, who claims to know the young man, says his boat must be the Weehawken ferry.
In the Fourteenth street subway station there came the other day a ragged urchin who held out a bandaged stump where a right arm should have been. His left hand held a box of gum and he begged the crowds to buy of his wares. Two men happened along. One eyed the lad suspiciously. "Till bet that he's really got an arm under his coat.... I'll bet he's faking," said the man. The other accepted his challenge. As the doubter started to pull back the youngster's coat, the boy broke away and ran up the stairway, revealing a perfectly good arm as he went.
Later, I was told some Fagin has a half dozen lads of 10 or 12 playing the roles of crippled beggars about town. Each day he carefully arranges a cloth-covered stump which projects from under a coat. Weeks of training are given, with veteran fakers giving the lesson.

MEMORIAL DEADLOCK LIFTED
The deadlock in Germany as to whether the "Ehrenmal" or Monument of Honor for the fallen German soldiers in the World War, shall be placed has been tentatively settled by a compromise. Three projects held the field, and none would give in. One was to build the monument near Berka, another, on the Rhine near Ehrenbreitstein, and a third favored Berlin. The Reichs Cabinet was unable to decide, and while postponing the Rhine project until there shall be no troops of occupation there, decided to build the Ehrenmal at Berka and to convert Schinkel Watch chamber in Berlin into a hall of honor. Leaders are at the same time political parties are to be consulted before the final decision.
Berlin will hold an extensive building trades exhibition in 1930.

RICKETT'S STEAM CARRIAGE FOR COMMON ROADS
(From the Scientific American, July 2, 1860)
There is a neat little steam-o-mobile that would carry three passengers in front and a fireman in the rear. The entire affair including four people and hand baggage only weighed two tons and a half. We quote the scientific American of above date: "We do not know but that the time may yet arrive when there will be a great 'Derby Day' for steam horses and when gentlemen will mount true fire-blooded animals, contending with lungs of iron for prizes of gold."
The experiments of the past pave the way for the progress of the future. A thorough comprehension of the daily needs of men plus a deep seated desire to render a service rather than merely sell merchandise has established its own reward-public favor.

THE STORY THUS FAR
Vance believes Skeel was innocent of the murder of Margaret Odell and that he lay hidden in a closet while the stranger did his work. Markham ridicules the theory but Vance is unshaken. He shatters Clever's alibi of being out of the city the night of the murder and urges Markham to check up thoroughly on Mannix's whereabouts. Dr. Lindquist, who had lied once before, is brought in again and questioned.

CHAPTER XXXII
Doctor Lindquist winced and considered the matter at some length. "And if I admit that my affection for Miss Odell was other than paternal—what then?"
Markham accepted the question as an affirmation.
"You were intensely jealous of her, were you not, doctor?"
"Jealousy," Doctor Lindquist remarked, with an air of ironic professionalism, "is not an unusual accompaniment to an infatuation. Authorities such as Krafft-Ebing, Moll, Freud, Ferenczi and Adler, I believe, regard it as an intimate psychological corollary of amatory attraction."
"Most instructive," Markham nodded his head appreciatively. "I am to assume, then, that you were infatuated with—or, let us say, amorously attracted by—Miss Odell, and that on occasions you exhibited the intimate psychological corollary of jealousy?"
"You may assume what you please. But I fail to understand why my emotions are any of your affair."
"Had your emotions not led you to highly questionable and suspicious acts, I would not be interested in them. But I have it on unimpeachable authority that your emotions so reacted on your better judgment that you threatened to take Miss Odell's life—and also your own. And in view of the fact that the young woman has since been murdered, the law naturally—and reasonably—is curious."

The doctor's normally pale face seemed to turn yellow and his long spidery fingers tightened over the arms of his chair; but otherwise he sat immobile and rigidly dignified, his eyes fixed intently on the district attorney. "I trust," added Markham, "you will not augment my suspicions by any attempt at denial."
Vance was watching the man closely. Presently he leaned forward.
"I say, doctor, what method of extermination did you threaten Miss Odell with?"
Doctor Lindquist jerked round, thrusting his head toward Vance. His dream in a long rasping breath, and his whole frame became tense. Blood suffused his cheeks; and there was a twitching of the muscles about his mouth and throat. For a moment he was afraid he was going to lose self-control. But after a moment's effort he steadied himself.

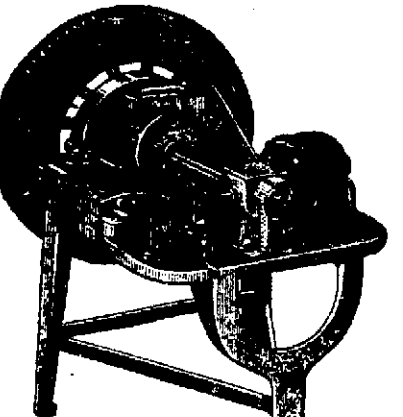

"You think perhaps, I threatened to strangle her?" His words were vibrant with the intensity of his passionate anger. "And you would like to turn my threat into a noose to hang me? Paugh!"
He paused, and when he spoke again his voice had become clearer. "It is quite true I once inadvisably attempted to frighten Miss Odell with a threat to kill her and to commit suicide. But if your information is accurate as you would have me believe, you are aware that I threatened her with a revolver. It is the weapon, I believe, that is conventionally mentioned when making empty threats. I certainly would not have threatened her with thuggee even had I contemplated so abominable an act."

"True," nodded Vance. "And it's a rather good point, don't you know?"
The doctor was evidently encouraged by Vance's attitude. He again faced Markham and elaborated his confession.

"A threat, I presume you know, is rarely the forerunner of a violent deed. Even a brief study of the human mind would teach you that a threat is prima facie evidence of one's innocence. A threat, generally, is made in anger, and acts as its own safety-valve."

He shifted his eyes. "I am not a married man; my emotional life has not been stabilized, as it were; and I short silence brook... by a question from Vance.

"By the bye, doctor, what is the name of the night nurse at your sanitarium?"
Doctor Lindquist looked up quickly. "My night nurse? Why—what has she to do with it? She was very busy Monday night. I can't understand."
Well, if you want her name I have no objection. It's Finkle—Miss Amelia Finkle."
Vance wrote down the name and rising, carried the slip of paper to Heath.
"Sergeant, bring Miss Finkle here tomorrow morning at eleven," he said, with a slight lowering of one eyelid.
"I sure will, sir. Good idea." His manner boded no good for Miss Finkle.
A cloud of apprehension spread over Dr. Lindquist's face.
"Forgive me if I say that I am insensible to the sanity of your cavalier methods." His tone betrayed only contempt. "May I hope that for the present your inquisition is ended?"
"I think that will be all, doctor," returned Markham politely. "May I have a taxicab called for you?"
"Your consideration overwhelms me. But my car is below," and Doctor Lindquist haughtily withdrew.

Markham immediately summoned Swacker and sent him for Tracy. The detective came at once, polishing his pince-nez and bowing affably. One would have taken him for an actor rather than a detective, but his ability in matters requiring delicate handling was a by-word in the department.
"I want you to fetch Mr. Louis Mannix again," Markham told him. "Bring him here at once; I'm waiting to see him."
Tracy bowed genially and, adjusting his glasses, departed on his errand.
"And now," said Markham, fixing Vance with a reproachful look, "I want to know what your idea was in putting Lindquist on his guard about the night nurse. Your brain isn't at par this afternoon."
"Do you think I didn't have the nurse in mind? And now you've warned him. He'll have used eleven tomorrow morning to coach her in her answers. Really, Vance, I can't conceive of any thing better calculated to defeat us in our attempt to substantiate the man's alibi."
"I did put a little fright into him,

LITTLE JOE PILLS AND ADVICE ARE MORE BLESSED TO GIVE THAN RECEIVE.

didn't?" Vance grinned complacently. "Whenever your antagonist begins talking exasperatingly about the insanity of your notions, he's already deucedly hot under the collar.

"But, Markham, old thing, don't burst into tears over my mental shortcomings. If you and I both thought of the doctor also thought of the wife doctor also thought of her? If this Miss Finkle were the type that could be so easily deceived, I've enlisted her peripatetic services two days ago, and she would have been mentioned along with the comely Mrs. Breeden as a witness to his presence at the sanitarium Monday night."
"The fact that he avoided all reference to the nurse shows that she's not to be wheedled into swearing falsely. . . . No, Markham, I'll happily put him on my guard. Now hold on to do something before we question Mrs. Finkle. And I'm sure enough to think I'm a smart fellow."

Galli-Curci Tells Girls How to Rouge

EDITOR'S NOTE—An opera star's methods for enhancing prettiness of eye and complexion are intimately disclosed by Amalia Galli-Curci, Metropolitan coloratura soprano, in this article. It is the second of a series of six written personally and exclusively for NEA Service and The Post-Crescent.

Amalia Galli-Curci

Let us begin with that important feature capable in itself of such wealth of expression—the eyes. Make-up color to match the eyes of the individual should be used, brown, black or blue, put lightly on the lids and delicately beneath the eyes themselves. The custom originated in Japan, where, having dark eyes, they blackened the lids and widened the contour of the eye with black coloring.

Need I add that this application of the proper color should be done with discretion, artistic reason, and absolute neatness. Any attempt to brighten the eyes with cosmetics is dangerous, but a good eye tonic is beneficial. If you have not fresh, clear skin underneath, the application of cosmetics looks awful. But never should the face be washed with water. Cleansing cream is the best medium to use. Rub the face in it before putting on make-up in the morning and at night in taking it off. If going out in the evening, again use cleansing cream before applying fresh make-up. To attempt at such times to freshen the make-up already on results only in unattractiveness.

The next step is to give the face a good rub with a block of ice. This should be done both night and morning. It tightens the skin and increases blood supply to the surface. Massage is good if used properly; otherwise it is injurious, and no less an authority than Sarah Bernhardt declared it so.

After an ice rub, then follows the application of good foundation cream. Rub this on lightly and not too much of it or it will clog the pores. The powder when you put it on as a final touch.

Applying the rouge, liquid or paste, on the foundation cream demands utmost nicety. To do it properly, study nature's way of placing coloring. But select the right tone of rouge for blondes, tangerine; for brunets, a darker rouge, raspberry or American Beauty, for instance.

Here is a list of "Be Carefuls" in putting on rouge:

Do not put it near the nose. Let the surface it covers be triangular in shape, with the point of the triangle toward the nose and widening outward.

The height of the coloring should be on the cheek bone, which gives brilliancy to the eyes. Put no rouge on the chin, but a little delicate dab on the ear lobes.

Eyebrows, hair and the cultivation of their beauty are the theme of Galli-Curci's next article.

Night Life And Health Won't Work

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
A old man of ninety, whose family is ill, is doing the cooking, washing the dishes, keeping the house straight, dressing his small grandchildren for school and looking after things generally.

He resents it greatly if anyone remarks about it being a fine thing for him to do, or to express surprise that he is able to do it. "Why not?" he demands sharply. "You think all ninety's so old! But it isn't old! I can eat all the rest of them under the table every time—fifteen buckwheat cakes big enough to cover a dinner plate at one sitting and then some. That's why I like to do the cooking. I can eat all I want without having them all say, 'Now, grandpa, you'd better be careful!'"

Those who know the old man say that he is strong because he was born in the country and was a farmer for fifty years. Fresh air! Fresh air and hard work. That's what does it," they say wisely and wag their heads.

But Grandpa will tell you it was early to bed that did it. "Never went to bed after eight," he says. "Bed at eight and up at five. That's nine hours sleep. Sometimes in winter it was six before we got up, so that's ten. And any man can stay well on nine or ten hours sleep."

He is entirely right. Most people do sleep too little. Americans have gone off a little on the subject of night life. Witness the night-club, midnight shows, the all-night dance, with breakfast at an all-night restaurant!

It's all right for girls who can sleep most of the next day, but how about men who must be at the office at nine o'clock? And how about the girls who must be there, too? A young person of eighteen, twenty, or twenty-two may stand it for a short time without feeling the effect. But time will tell, even in the young.

Really it is amazing how well we do stand up under abuse! The human body is surely the greatest victim of our folly. And we wonder what heart disease is so steadily on the increase. There are none so blind as those who won't see.

ARTICHOKE SALAD
Artichokes are delicious served chilled, with Russian dressing and cheese wafers.

SHINY CRYSTAL
To give brilliancy to your glass and crystal ware, put a little vinegar in the water in which you wash it.

CLEAN BLANKETS
When washing blankets, shake first, then plunge into warm suds and wash. Hang on line, stretching firmly, and rinse with the garden hose.

TASTY PUDDING
Left-over cooked breakfast food makes a delicious baked pudding when mixed with one egg, covered with milk and seasoned with sugar, vanilla and raisins.

Her father Newton Baylis, was a singer, her mother was both a singer and a pianist and Miss Baylis' own childhood was devoted to music, mostly the violin.

The family was still quite young as it landed in Durban. Her father decided to stay. So in a hired bullock cart they trekked all over the country, giving theatrical performances of their own. In many of the African towns there was no hall but the courthouse. Audiences were required to bring their own chairs and lights.

For eight years Miss Baylis roughed it. When she came back to England she found her aunt very much overworked in the management of the "Old Vic" music hall and she became her secretary. Miss Baylis' association with the theater has lasted for more than thirty years.

She was the first theater manager in London to give a full evening's program of motion pictures. And they paid so well that for two years she was able to give symphony concerts with the proceeds from the films.

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Dearest Marye:

Well, Good Influence, what's the matter with exerting yourself in behalf of your own character? I don't think Alan is selfish to want to keep the car while you are away. I'm sorry I put the idea of driving it out here into your head, but I was thoughtlessly passing on Florence's message.

It ought to make your visit more enjoyable if you know he has something to amuse himself with. And you know Frank still has the old Lizzie. Says he's going to trade it in a new car. So you will have something to get around in—unless Frank sends the Lizzie to the junk man as he threatens to do when he gets mad.

He's mad a lot lately. Having trouble with his girl and over the most unheard of things. Frank calls it a "complex," whatever in the world that is. He was calling her up about going to a dance the other night and it seemed she had planned to go to a show with her father. They had the craziest conversation. From what Frank said to her I think she told him she had a "father fixation."

Well, if she has anything like that I think she'd better see a doctor and not telling Frank what's the matter with her. I asked him afterwards what it meant and he said it was highbrow lingo for an unnatural attachment.

What things you youngsters do talk about! Frank says all the girls he knows like to discuss these classroom subjects. Birth control is a leading topic he said, but I guess he didn't mean that. He told me to listen around and find out. I spoke to Florence about it and she laughed and said that was light stuff. Maybe you know what psychoanalysis, pituitary glands and biology mean to these kids but I'm sure I don't. Florence told me they mean life and how to spell the words but they don't sound like fit conversation for boys and girls to me.

I tried to tell Pa about it and he said he never expected to hear me say such things. And if Frank was such a fool as to get het up over a girl who had ideas like that in his head he'd better get rid of his old tin can and stop taking her out to the lake on joy rides.

Lovingly,
MOM.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

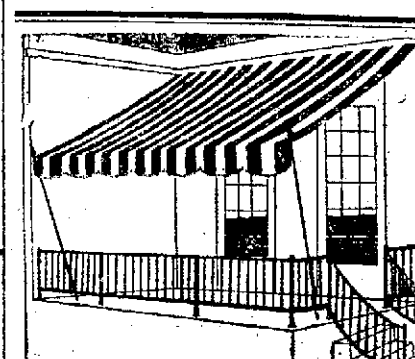

The "Luxury" of a Clay Pack

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Do you regard a clay pack as one of those delightful inventions for those who can pay to look young? When your own face seems to sag, looks sallow and tired do you simply accept it as "one of those things?" All it needs is care. A tired skin can be remarkably refreshed by my simple clay pack.

Get a tube of Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay and apply it as directed. When you wash it off the gentle, purging action of the clay leaves a pleasant afterglow. The pores are freed of tiny film-forming clots of dirt which become imbedded, and, particularly in oily skins, form blackheads. Your face is thoroughly freed from these obstructions and the pores can function normally. The clay is an astringent, leaving the pores closed, the skin firm and clear.

My White Youth Clay is the only product of its kind of which I know. It is dainty and agreeable to use. Get it at any toilet counter, in several sizes.

HIGHWAYS OPENED TO 4 TON TRUCKS

Oconto-co Highway Commissioner Bars Heavier Busses, However

BY W. F. WINSEY

Oconto — E. W. MacAllister, road commissioner of Oconto county, opened the main highways of the county to 3,000 pound trucks Monday morning. After the announcement, the Oconto and Oconto Falls freight lines lost no time in getting out. The roads are still closed to busses, as they weigh in the neighborhood of 14,000 pounds and some portions of the roads are not considered fit to carry such loads.

The bus and freight lines using the roads of Oconto county have cooperated with the highway commissioner in the preservation of the roads this spring, says Mr. MacAllister. He does not anticipate further trouble with the roads this spring. The side roads are drying up rapidly and farmers living on those roads are having no trouble driving back and forth. The road patrolmen have been out two weeks and their work is very effective at this time.

In about two weeks, construction work on the roads may be started in Oconto-co. The contract for the big road job, a federal project extending from Lakeview to a point nine miles north, will not be let before the latter part of April. Stretches of the highways over the county will be graded this summer.

The new bridge on Highway 41, in the city of Oconto, will be opened to traffic in about a month. It is a concrete bridge consisting of four 36 foot spans with a 36 foot roadway and 6

NEARBY
TOWNSYOUNGEST ZWICK IN
RING EARNS VICTORY
ON GREEN BAY CARDGeorge Zwick Wins His Scrap
but Miller Loses Slashing Fight

Kaukauna—Ringside scribes who watched the two Kawtown amateur boxers, George Zwick and Marvin Miller, in their two battles at the Columbus club at Green Bay Friday evening were inclined to give them nothing but praise in their reports of the fight for the Green Bay daily. In fact the Zwick-Kollman fight was considered one of the best of the evening and the Green Bay fans were much impressed by the newest member of the famous Zwick family into the fight ring.

Miller was given considerable credit for his gameness in coming back for more punishment in the third round after being practically out at the end of the second.

One scribe reported the following for the two Kuw fighters: "Kaukauna had a pair of batlers in the going and the natives of the Electric City were down strong verbally and otherwise. They got a 50-50 break for their trip as George Zwick, the youngest brother of the famous Kawtown fighting family earned a clean cut decision over Harvey Kollman, one of Green Bay's best 'simon pures' but Marvin Miller was forced to take the count before Billy Hundermark of Green Bay. Miller was crashing hard and the blows were felt by the Electric City youngsters. Miller was nearly out at the end of the second frame but came back gamely in the third only to take a terrific pounding. After several knockdowns, the scrap was halted and Hundermark waved to his corner a winner."

"The Hundermark-Miller affair was quite a battle all the way. The Kaukauna had bobbed out of the corner full of life and it took Hundermark a little while to get his bearings. Miller kept on 'pepping away' but his punches were not loaded with steam. It was different with Hundermark. He was crashing hard and the blows were felt by the Electric City youngsters. Miller was nearly out at the end of the second frame but came back gamely in the third only to take a terrific pounding. After several knockdowns, the scrap was halted and Hundermark waved to his corner a winner."

Right along with the Green Bay reports on the amateur comes word that Phil Zwick is expected along in a few days to spend a short vacation in Kaukauna. Phil underwent an operation on his arm at the Mayo clinic at Rochester last Friday and after a short rest will head his way to Kaukauna.

Green Bay fight promoters are attempting to get the Kaw man on a card at the Columbus club but it is doubtful whether Zwick will be able to fight for another three months. In the event he is signed another prominent featherweight will be his opponent.

MUSIC SUPERVISOR
SENT TO NATIONAL MUSIC CONVENTIONSchool Board Debates Advise-ability of Sending Teachers to Meetings

Kaukauna—Miss Eleanor Wooster, supervisor of music of the Kaukauna public schools, will attend the national convention of music supervisors in Chicago starting April 15. This was decided upon at a meeting of the board of education held Monday evening in the high school offices after a discussion. The principal argument against her going to Chicago was that it established a precedent and the supervisors of all the school departments would want to attend conventions. A number of the board members believed that and should be put to this practice before it cost the city too much money. Others maintained that the superintendent should be the only one to attend conventions with the exception of the state board of education meetings. Those in favor argued that the conventions were necessary if progress was to be maintained and the local music department remained among the best departments in the state.

The board instructed Superintendent J. F. Cavanaugh to prepare figures showing just how much it costs each year to educate a child in the city. Members of the board are anxious to find out if the cost is greater in Kaukauna than in other valley cities. Mr. Cavanaugh will have his report ready for the regular meeting in May.

Mr. Cavanaugh told the board that Miss M. Clare Wagner, head of the forensics department of the high school, had definitely made up her mind not to return to this city next term. A number of applications for this position were read but no action will be taken on them until the May meeting. The board also will decide upon a full time athletic coach at that time.

Other teachers who haven't turned in their contracts are Olin G. Dyer, principal; Ludwig, science instructor; Stanley Begun, manual training instructor; J. J. Haas, Junior High school principal and Miss Annette O'Connor.

The remainder of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of how successful the bond issue for a new high school auditorium and gymnasium would be.

PRINCE OF WALES NOW
MUCH BETTER TALKER

London, England—(P)—The Prince of Wales is believed to have been under the training of experts in public speaking, as many of his mannerisms have disappeared, and in recent speeches he has shown far greater repose. He now speaks at dinners with one hand in his pocket and the other in repose on the table.

Formerly he used to pull at his coat in a manner which became so noticeable that picture records of his public appearances were often laughable. Hands, with the Prince, as with all persons who speak or sing in public, were a serious problem. But he has learned how to keep them out of his way.

SIR OLIVER LODGE NOT FOR SCRAPPING MEDIUMS

London—(P)—Sir Oliver Lodge never in his life thought spiritualistic mediums should be abolished, or anything of the sort, as he was reported to have stated in a paper read before the international metaphysical congress in Paris.

The story that the famous spiritualist had denounced mediums as being a source of possible fraud in direct registration of psychic phenomena was attributed as due to some misunderstanding for which he could not account.

"There has been some misapprehension, as I have never said anything which might have been interpreted as meaning that I was in favor of abolishing mediums," said Sir Oliver.

"How could we carry on research if we were to scrap our tools?"

Loss Of Sight No Handicap
To Noted Heart Specialist

New Orleans—It is a terrific handicap to lose your sight when you are 13 years old. And yet—

One of the greatest heart specialists in the world is Dr. Robert L. Babcock of Chicago, who lost his sight at that age but went on to win world-wide fame as a scientist.

Dr. Babcock, here for the convention of the American College of Physicians, is now 75. From the moment when, entering his teens, he lost his sight, he has devoted himself to study; today there probably are not a dozen men on earth who know as much about the human heart as he does.

"TWO OUT OF TEN"

Heart disease, according to Dr. Babcock, is a malady to which Americans are peculiarly susceptible.

"Two out of every 10 children living and 10 years old today will eventually die of some form of heart disease," he says. "Heart diseases are responsible for more deaths in America than any other single cause."

"The reason is the strenuous way Americans do things. Women particularly tax their strength to the utmost with never-ending haste and intensity."

"This American rush is the cause of heart diseases which develop after middle age or late in life. Periodic health examinations are a preventive. Anyone who will regularly come to his doctor for examination, learn his own strength and live within it, can go on for years with heart disturbances. They are not to be feared greatly if they are detected early and treated correctly."

Dr. Babcock has found a definite, direct relationship between heart disease and tonsillitis.

"For 25 years I have been watching experimentation in this phase of medicine," he says. "In all the years of my practice I have never had a patient with valvular trouble in whom I did not find evidence of tonsillar infection at some time during his life."

Dr. Babcock spent many years in study before he entered practice—more years, perhaps, than would have been the case if he had not lost his sight.

After finishing his preliminary education at the Philadelphia Institute for the Blind, Dr. Babcock studied at Western Reserve University, the University of Michigan, the Chicago Medical College and Columbia University. Then, learning German by ear, he went abroad and spent years in studying with the great specialists of Munich, Wurzburg and Berlin.

BUILDS UP MORALE

"And human courage counts, too. Too many, I think, make the mistake of treating their patients' bodies. I try to treat their souls first. I try to establish or build up the courage and morale that are one of humanity's greatest assets in fighting this disease."

"I am a southerner. So I feel privileged to speak as one of the family when I say that we white folks in the south have no small responsibility of the tremendous sweep of tuberculosis through our negro population. Every city in the south should abolish its negro slums; should clean up those unspeakable shacks in back alleys and dirty streets, where tuberculosis flourishes."

"We should do it for our own protection if we don't do it for the sake of the negroes themselves. The standard of civic cleanliness in the south is not as high as the standard

FAILURE OF ARMOUR MAY KILL ATTORNEY

Oklahoma Man Shot by Sheriff in Spite of Wearing Metal

Madill, Okla.—(P)—Failure of a coat of armor to stop a bullet has left County Attorney Franz Kim near death and his erstwhile friend, Sheriff Ed Long, under technical arrest. Long shot Kim when the attorney took exception to a bill presented to the county commissioners by the sheriff, and, witnesses declared, appeared clad in steel armor and armed with a pistol. The argument started when a bill for $62 for bringing a prisoner here was submitted by Long. It developed that Kim had not approved the bill, which had assistant. Although the "commissioners" allowed the claim, Kim and Long continued to argue. Finally Kim rushed from the room, shouting he "would get the difference."

Kim soon reappeared in the door clad in armor that covered his chest and back. He carried a pistol. Earl Ayers, real estate broker attending the session, said Long ordered the attorney to halt, and when he continued to advance, the sheriff drew his pistol and fired, apparently trying to shoot the gun from the attorney's hand.

The first bullet was wild, and the sheriff shot again, striking him in the leg. Long followed with another shot and Kim fell to the floor. It was found that the bullet struck the edge of the armor, was deflected and entered the attorney's abdomen.

Physicians Work Wonders In Campaign On Diabetes

Madison—"No cure for diabetes has been found, but when modern treatment of diet and the use of insulin are constantly followed, the diabetic patient remains to all intents and purposes healthy and perfectly well."

This announcement in a bulletin by the health committee of the State Medical Society this week is founded on several years' experience with the use of insulin in checking diabetes. The bulletin declares, however, that both the diet and the use of insulin should be given under strict instruction. It adds that there are thousands of people in Wisconsin who are now living normal lives due to the results of discovery.

In the treatment of diabetes it is necessary to allow the patient to eat a sufficient amount of ordinary food to keep up his weight and allow him to do whatever productive work he desires," declares the bulletin. "The diet which is now prescribed for diabetic patients is devised to furnish as little sugar as is necessary for the body and to make up the balance of food by the use of large amounts of fat. Since, however, even fat is to the formation of some sugar in the body all the food must be measured, and there is no food which the diabetic patient should eat in unlimited quantities."

"The important thing for the diabetic is to keep his weight up and, therefore, to keep his diet in perfect condition. The use of insulin, however, is not a cure, but a means of keeping the body in perfect condition. It is not a cure, but a means of keeping the body in perfect condition. It is not a cure, but a means of keeping the body in perfect condition.

thinking that he is taking proper care of himself. If too much insulin is used it will cause several unpleasant symptoms and if the excess is large enough it may cause very serious complications."

STAGE And SCREEN

"THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY"

To those carping critics and that portion of the public who assert that there is nothing new in the movies, there is a direct and defiant answer.

That answer is "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," First National Pictures' liberal screen version of John Biskin's great novel. The local engagement of the picture opened last night at the Elite Theatre for a 3 day engagement.

The traditions of the movies are abandoned with such thoroughness that it seems the producers of the picture must never have heard of them. The picture contains brilliant comedy and sly satire. It makes its characters human and at times ridiculous. The most beautiful woman of all time—Helen of Troy—is not a perfect wife. She is not even a perfect sweetheart, as Paris speedily discovered. Paris, on the other hand, is human too, and Menelaos has all the attributes of the tired business man.

Maria Corda, an Hungarian actress brought to this country for the role, takes her place immediately among the foremost screen beauties and Lewis Stone, as Menelaos, adds another feather to a cap already well stocked with them. Ricardo Cortez, as Paris; George Fawcett, as Eteoneus and Alice White, as Adrastus, to say nothing of numerous other players give performances of smoothness and understanding.

Arthur at Fischer's Appleton Theatre last times today. Robert Z. Leonard directed the new picture, in which Charlotte Greenwood, Louis Lorraine and others of note appear.

FOREIGN BEAUTY LYA DE PUTTI, IN "BUCK PRIVATES"

Lya De Putti, noted foreign actress of rare exotic beauty, will be seen at Fischer's Appleton Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday in "Buck Privates," a Universal-Jewel production.

In this comedy of the American Army Occupation in Germany just after the late war Miss De Putti portrays the colorful role of a "trautlein," daughter of a German general captured just before the armistice by Malcolm McGregor, who plays the leading male role.

Miss De Putti was born in Vasce near Budapest, Hungary, and started dancing when a small girl. Naturally she went on the stage and after a few years was a prominent dancer in Berlin.

While she was dancing at the Scala Theatre she was "discovered" by Jo May, noted European director, and was signed for motion pictures. She played in European films five years before America recognized her true merit in "Variety" and brought her to this country to become a star.

"Buck Privates" is her fifth American performance. "Midnight Rose," also a Universal picture, being her fourth.

She already has an American following which is amazing when one considers her short American experience.

"Buck Privates" was directed by Melville Brown with a supporting cast including Zasu Pitts, James Marcus, Eddie Gribbon, Capt. Ted Duncan, Bud Jamison, Les Bates, and 500 American war veterans as McGregor buddies.

PHILLIES FORCE ATHLETICS TO EXTRA-INNING 8-5 VICTORY

Mackmen Triumph In 11th After National Leaguers Fight Way To Tie In 8th

Benton Allows Senators One Run as Giants Win; Champ Yanks Lose to Atlanta

New York (AP)—As 11 major league teams are drawing nearer home by day, they may view with some alarm the example set by the two Philadelphia clubs already at home—working overtime before the starting bell rings.

The family argument of the Athletics and Phillies became so heated Monday that it was necessary to play 31 innings before the American League team were returned victors, 8 to 5. The Phillies came from behind to tie the score in the eighth and remained on their best behavior until the 11th inning when they threw discretion to the winds and committed numerous baseball sins, including a balk.

Larry Benton met the challenge to pitch nine innings for the New York Giants by turning Washington back with one run, while the National Leaguers were counting ten Benton struck a blow in his behalf in the shape of a home run.

HIT COVELESKIE HARD

The world champion New York Yankees saw the Atlanta Crackers steal their thunder by smashing out 19 hits to score ten runs, just enough, Lou Gehrig's three triples proved in testing but not in the clutch. Stan Coveleskie, after attempting a comeback, found the southerners trying to give him a setback. They took the lead while he was pitching and never headed.

The bubbling spirits of the Chicago Cubs were near the boiling point as they shelled the Pittsburgh Pirates into submission for the fifth time in as many chances. The score was 6 to 4. Art Nehf showed that there is life in the old southpaw yet by pitching seven innings of good left handed baseball.

Brooklyn continued to go along under the momentum of hard hitting and good pitching and won from Jacksonville 12 to 4. The veteran, Bill Doak took advantage of the youth of the Southeastern leaguers and shut them out while he was pitching.

The St. Louis Cardinals stopped Knoxville of the "Sally" League, 9 to 8, two former cupples Ray Blum and Chick Hefner leading the winning attack. Blades for four hits for nine bases exceeded his normal spring output.

Slightly stunned at Tulsa, where they get many of their players, by a first inning home run with the bases full, the St. Louis Browns kept pecking away until they won 9 to 8.

Chicago's White Sox won from Memphis 5 to 3 because they were paying off on runs and not hits, the big leaguers falling behind in safeties.

Jake May and Ray Kohn pitched so well for Cincinnati that the Reds were able to beat the Louisville Colonels while they were scoring seven runs.

Vic Sorrell and George Smith shut out Del Pratt's Waco club as the Detroit Tigers scored seven runs, aided by five hits from Harry Rice's bat.

DIVISION ICE TITLES SETTLED TUESDAY EVE

New York (AP)—Resumption of ice hostilities takes place in Boston and Montreal Tuesday night with divisional championships in the National Hockey League at stake. The New York Rangers clash with the Boston Bruins for the United States title while the Canadians and Maroons wrangle for dominion honors.

Finalists in both sections then will come together in a five-game series to determine the world's championship and the new owners of the Stanley cup won last year by the Ottawa Senators.

Risko Only Fair Fighter But How He Loves To Scrap

BY HENRY L. FARRELL

Following the very effective if trying method of fighting for recognition instead of buying or bluffing, Johnny Risko has flourished into a position where he has to be considered as a possible challenger for the heavyweight championship.

The blimp-like former amateur of Cleveland is in the singular position of a fighter branded and stamped as no good, but so good that not one of the other heavyweights aspiring for a chance at Gene Tunney's title can prove it.

Following his victory over Jack Sharkey, which shattered all of Tex Rickard's plans for a colorful challenger for the champion, the question is being asked almost universally—what has Risko got that makes him good if he is so terrible?

The question is hard to answer. His qualifications are an annoying left hook and a concrete constitution. His chief virtue as a fighter is that he loves to fight, and he's always willing to fight.

Around his home town he is no more highly regarded as a great fighter than he is in New York. They will tell you in Cleveland that he has no excuse for winning fights. But they can't offer any reason why the other fellows do not beat him.

The point may be illustrated by a story told by the matchmaker who arranged the fight between Risko and Tunney in 1925, shortly before Tunney became the accepted challenger of Dempsey for the championship.

The matchmaker introduced Tunney with an offer of $5000 and Tunney at that time was not swamped with offers in "grand." Tunney suggested that he would like to talk his own business for the first time, just for the novelty of it and he asked Billy Gibson his manager, to retire from the room.

"Now tell me," Tunney said to the matchmaker when they were alone, "what kind of a fighter this Risko is."

"He's a tough little fellow," the matchmaker told him.

That's what they are still saying about him three years later.

The matchmaker quoted from Risko's record that he had never won a good fight and that he was just a tearing in fellow who liked to fight. Tunney couldn't understand why he should be regarded as being so tough when he never won a fight. It couldn't be explained in any logical way.

"Tell me," Tunney asked again "how does he fight?" Is he a stand up fighter or—

"He's just a hooker with his left hand and he throws himself with it and he's tough to hurt. That's all."

"Maybe he's too tough," Tunney suggested. "You know I'm working up to Dempsey and I don't want to look bad now."

When he was assured that it wouldn't be a bad match for him, Tunney said: "Well, getting down to the financial part of the business if he is so tough I think I should get $6000 instead of $5000." And the match was made.

Those who saw the fight remember that for two rounds Risko mauled Tunney all over the ring and looked like a sure winner until Tunney nearly knocked his head off with a right hand late in the third round and almost caved him in with another right under the heart.

After the fight Tunney showed two terrible swollen hands to the matchmaker and said: "You certainly told the truth. He is tough; mighty tough, even if you call him a bum fighter."

That elegant expression—tough bum—described Risko properly at that time and applies to him perhaps to a lesser degree today. He is still as tough as he was then and they will tell you in Cleveland that he hasn't improved a lick as a fighter since he left the amateurs.

But he's up there, nevertheless, and he's right at Tunney's door. He got there by fighting, too, and what other reason is necessary? If he's too tough on the others, that's a good reason, even if he is a bum fighter.

CONNIE DECIDES TO TAKE ELEPHANT OFF ATHLETIC UNIFORMS

Philadelphia (AP)—Connie Mack says he is not superstitious, but the Philadelphia Athletics after next Wednesday will no longer wear a white elephant symbol on their uniforms.

The new uniforms will be trimmed with royal blue instead of navy blue and the letter "A" will replace the elephant.

Manager Mack recalled that the last time the team wore this uniform was in 1914, the year the A's won the American League pennant.

Wisconsin wasn't on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie last year in the inter-college rowing championship but big Frank Orth, veteran stroke of three years will lead a crew in the big classic this year. There will be five veterans in the boat and three very promising sophomores. "Maybe we'll get that trip to Amsterdam," Coach Dad" Vul and Orth say.

ROCKEFELLER RETURNS HOME BETTER GOLFER

Ormond Beach, Fla. (AP)—John D. Rockefeller, who has learned during the last four months something about golf he never knew before, turned toward home Tuesday happy that he has been able to cut a few strokes off his daily six-hole golf game, and refreshed after a long rest.

Since he came here Nov. 30, Mr. Rockefeller has learned a new way to address the ball. It has improved his game to such an extent that he has seldom missed his daily play and has been able to turn in a score satisfactory to himself. In addition, his drives have given him upwards of 150 yards, another source of pride to the 88-year old old king.

Chicago — Red Uhlan, Los Angeles, and Ted Esterbrook, Niles, Ohio, knocked out Howard Bentz, Milwaukee (5) Dick Watzel, St. Paul, defeated Jack Scarton, Newark, N. J. (8).

Philadelphia — Phil Kaplan, won over Babe McGargary, Oklahoma (10).

BASKETBALL COACHES MEET IN GYM UNIFORMS

Chicago—When the National Association of Basketball Coaches meets here on Thursday and Friday, the members will don gym clothes for the conference.

"You see," said Forrest C. Allen, president of the association, "I have asked the coaches to bring their gym clothes, so if there is any argument about rules, we can iron it out on the basketball floor. That's better than doing it on a blackboard."

Memphis — Frankie Dugan, Memphis, knocked out Al Knowles, New Orleans (1).

Sarasota, Fla. — Young Strubling, Macoon knocked out Marshall Blackstock, Birmingham, (2).

CUB INFIELDER

Being somewhat dubious of his present infield, Manager Joe McCarthy of the Chicago Cubs recently bought Ray Jacobs from Los Angeles, turning over Pitcher Osborn and an outfielder to be named later for him Jacobs played first base for the Los Angeles club last season, but is said to be equally adept at any position and will serve as utility infielder for the Chicago club this season.

CHICAGO CUBS SET FOR PENNANT SCRAP

McCarthy Has Strengthened Club Which Should Be in Running

It may be that in the rush of events in the southern training camps not sufficient attention was given to the California fields where the champion Pirates and the Chicago Cubs did their preparatory work for the 1928 campaign.

This applies particularly to the Cubs as the Pirates monopolized the gossip that spread toward the east.

As the Cubs get nearer home the impression gets stronger that Joe McCarthy has done some serious building and that he has a ball club that should be figured seriously with the other clubs that are looked upon as serious rivals of the champions.

It was admitted generally that Kiki Cuyler would be a most valuable addition to the Chicago outfield, but there was some question as to the sagacity in impairing the infield at second base to provide a great kick in the outfield.

But from the form he has shown in the pre-season games it looks as if Cuyler will be the sensation of the year and might be the inspiration that would increase the mechanical efficiency of the whole team.

There may be another great factor in the improvement of the club who has hardly been mentioned. He is Arthur Nehf, discarded by the Cincinnati Reds as a hopeless victim of neuritis in his pitching hand. Nehf is one of the smartest pitchers in the game, and, according to reports, his physical disability has been overcome.

Some critics said the great weakness of the Cubs last year during their drive for the pennant, which failed in the stretch, was the lack of left-hand pitching. With Percy Jones and Nehf this weakness ought to be corrected.

When McCarthy gave up Sparky Adams for Cuyler he expressed the confidence that either Fred Maguire or Norman McMillan would handle second base acceptably, but the wise boys shook their heads.

Apparently McCarthy has decided they may not do and he got busy at once to get some reserve material. He secured Ray Jacobs from Los Angeles. Jacobs can play any position in the infield and should be a most valuable man.

The Cubs certainly look stronger than the Giants, the Braves and the Reds and it might not be a fatal shock for the nation to see them in the world's series next fall.

As far as their pennant chances are concerned, however, smart baseball men will have you remember that Charley Root, with 26 victories last year, was the great driving power of the team. They point out that when Root failed in the final quarter of the race the team collapsed and they will ask you to recall how many pitchers have had a great year after a great year.

It is cinch that the Cubs will have plenty of fighting spirit and they will not suffer inferiority fixation because they failed to make the grade last year. It was not the lack of a fighting heart that kept them out of the championship.

NEW BUILDINGS HELD UP BY TECHNICALITY

Governor Not Sure "Addition to Library" Means a Separate Building

Madison—(AP)—Two building projects for the University of Wisconsin must receive approval of Governor Fred R. Zimmerman and C. A. Halbert, state chief engineer, before work on them can be started.

One is the greatly coveted field house for the athletic department; the other is a new University library unit. Before plans for the library unit may be carried out, it is necessary for the Governor to release an appropriation of $550,000 made by the legislature for "an addition to the library." The proposed unit is to be built separate from the present structure.

No release of funds by the Governor is necessary for the field house, but, under the statutes, all building projects of the state must have the plans for them approved by the governor and state chief engineer before they can be carried out.

The field house is to be financed by a loan of $325,000 from the state teachers' retirement fund at 4½ percent interest to the Wisconsin Building Corporation, which is to erect the building. The Wisconsin Building Corporation is leasing from the University regents the ground on which the football stadium is located, and sufficient ground adjoining for the field house.

The University regents, in turn, will rent from the building corporation the completed field house at a rental sufficient to pay principal and interest on the loan within 80 years.

Although no expenditure of legislative funds is called for in this program, it is, nevertheless, under the statutes, necessary for the governor and state chief engineer to approve the proposition formally in writing before it can be carried out.

The Governor has been studying for some time the matter of releasing the $550,000 legislative appropriation for a new library unit. The appropriation specified that it was to be for "an addition" to the library, while the proposed building is a separate unit.

The attorney general's department has declared that the funds may legally be expended for the new unit. Governor Zimmerman, however, has expressed himself as fearing that release of the $550,000 would commit the University to a three million dollar building program.

He plans to confer with C. G. Blough, secretary of the board of public affairs, before taking action on the library funds release.

DEBATE TEAMS READY TO ARGUE FOR TITLE

Madison—(AP)—Forensic stars of Wisconsin high schools were in Madison Tuesday, ready for their annual state championship debate. Three schools, winners in the north, central and southern sections, were the participants.

Teams representing Sturgeon Bay, Chippewa Falls and Portage high schools are to argue the question "Resolved that automobile drivers should be compelled to carry a minimum of $5,000 liability insurance."

Governor Fred R. Zimmerman is to wield the gavel at the speaker's rostrum in the Assembly. John Callahan will preside over the debate in the Senate and C. J. Balzer, president of the Wisconsin high school forensic association, sponsor of the state meet, will be the officer for the section debating in the G. A. R. room.

The winning team will receive the state trophy cup, its members gold medals. The second best team will, like the third, take home a banner and members of the two teams will have silver and bronze medals.

Believe Black Creek Man Is State's Oldest Miller

BY W. F. WINSEY

Black Creek—"Take a seat as I am mixing two kinds of tobacco so that I may have a good smoke this morning from the mixture," was the greeting and explanation extended the writer recently by M. C. McNely of this village who is perhaps, in point of uninterrupted service, the oldest living miller still on the job in the state of Wisconsin. On a paper spread on his knees Mr. McNely had emptied a small can of high grade tobacco and a large package of a cheaper grade, and it looked as if he were not only mixing enough for "a good smoke" that morning but a succession of good smokes throughout that and other days.

"I shall put the mixture in the better container of the two," continued Mr. McNely "so that visitors depending on eye sight instead of their sense of smell will credit me, if they do not remain over long, with the use of the best grade of tobacco obtainable."

Notwithstanding life's burdens that have been accumulating for 83 years, Mr. McNely is erect, sturdy and to all outward appearances fit to reach the century goal.

The back of his left hand and fingers is as blue as indigo, the discoloration being caused by particles of steel from picks used in dressing bluffs for grinding wheat before the invention and use of rolls, penetrating the skin. "The first thing that the proprietor of a flour mill did when an applicant for a miller's position appeared was to examine the back of the applicant's hand," said Mr. McNely. "A blue skin on the back of his hand was a miller's diploma of graduation and experience, and the strongest recommendation he could present. Any miller might turn on the water, start the stones revolving and hang bags on spouts but it was only the expert who could dress and balance a mill stone. The blue color was the mark of the expert."

Mr. McNely started out on his milling career at Pine River in 1868 when grist mills and custom milling were popular and when these mills were located on most of the small water powers of the country, convenient to farmers who were raising grain as the chief, if not the only, farm product.

He is now the owner and operator of the feed mill in Black Creek. He built the mill at Pound, and has owned and operated mills in the cities of several states including Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin. He has served as miller in one or more of the large flouring mills of Green Bay, Menasha, and Neenah when the mills of those cities were flourishing. At one time, he owned the Shiocton mill. He operated mills in Amherst, Omro, Pufferville, Royalton and Nichols.

He used to grind the wheat the customers brought to the mill into flour after removing a part of the wheat to pay the cost of grinding and give the customer the flour, middlings, and bran. "Grinding the wheat that a customer actually brought to the mill, while the customer waited, and returning to him the flour from his own wheat, would be an utter impossibility now even if the old-time first mill were still standing and in operation," said Mr. McNely.

But all the old grist mills have disappeared from the streams and the water powers that had exceptional value have been procured by electric power companies. Instead of trying to get their own wheat ground, the growers market their wheat and buy their flour at the grocery stores.

Instead of using water power for grinding, feed mills use gas or electric power and farmers who grind their own feed on their farms use tractor power.

While one after the other the grist mills were passing out of existence as a result of the relentless encroachment of the century's latest roller mills on their business, the millers who operated the grist mills dropped into some other kind of employment with a few exceptions.

COUNTY NOT FORCED TO GIVE ROAD AID

Madison—(AP)—The attorney general has advised Paul B. Conley, district attorney of Lafayette-co, that a county board cannot be compelled to grant aid to a town for the improvement of a highway within the town unless such highway is a portion of the system of prospective state highways. Neither can it be compelled to grant aid if it is a part of such system, unless the town has received donations or voted a tax equal to the amount of aid required.

The town of Darlington had presented a petition to the county board for $500 to meet a contemplated tax of like amount by the town for improvement of a highway which is not a part of the county system of prospective highways nor a county trunk. Under the ruling of the state legal department, the county board of Lafayette-co is not required to give the aid requested.

WARN TRAVELERS OFF OF UNPAVED HIGHWAYS

Has Made Dirt Roads Practically Impassable

Continued warm weather has caused earth sections of road throughout the state to become practically impassable and the state highway commission does not recommend making extensive trips at present unless they can be made on hard surfaced highways, according to the weekly highway report.

Practically all counties are limiting gross loads to 3,500 and 4,500 pounds on Class B roads and 6,000 pounds on Class A roads.

Following is the report on important highways in this district:

Highway 10, Manitowoc through Appleton to Stevens Point, Eau Claire and Hudson, very rough when frozen and practically impassable when soft.

Highway 26, Beloit to Oshkosh, good.

Highway 41, Illinois line to Milwaukee, Appleton and Marinette, good to Green Bay and poor to Marinette.

Highway 47, Shawano to Rhinelander, poor.

Highway 55, Milwaukee to Kaukauna, fair.

Highway 110, Oshkosh to Fremont, good.

End Oily, Sallow Skin
A little Calomine powder sprinkled on a wet cloth and rubbed gently over the face each night ends shiny, oily skins—puts new life into sallow skin, and cleans the pores of all dust, dirt and prevents blackheads. It makes the skin feel refreshed and bright, so you will enjoy a good night's rest.

EPIDEMIC OF RABIES HAS NO EFFECT HERE, VETERINARIANS SAY

Many Owners of Dogs Have Had Pets Immunized
Against Disease

Although many Wisconsin localities are having trouble with rabies, and the state laboratory of hygiene is receiving more than the usual number of specimens for rabie examination, Appleton has not had a case reported for at least two years, according to local veterinary surgeons.

Many Appleton dog owners who are especially fond of their pets have had their dogs immunized with rabies vaccine. Three dogs are awaiting this treatment this week, according to one surgeon, who has received the vaccine for the prevention of rabies. When a dog is immunized, a tag is tied to his collar, stating that it has undergone the treatment. According to the veterinary surgeons, if this was done to every dog in the city, and licenses weren't issued until the dog had been vaccinated, all danger of rabies would be abolished.

Dogs, because of their ranging habits, are the principal distributors, although all warm blooded animals and occasionally wild animals are susceptible to rabies. The control lies in restrictive measures whenever rabies appears.

Proof that the animal has rabies can be had by sending the head, packed in ice, to the state laboratory of hygiene in Madison for examination. If the animal is rabid, it should be killed without damaging the head, which is the part that must be examined for evidence of rabies. Shooting through the body is the most convenient way of dispatching the animal.

She is about 31 years of age, weighs 115 pounds, is five feet seven inches tall, has a fair complexion, medium brown hair and eyes. Her occupation is beauty parlor operator. OPEN DAM GATES AS FLOOD WATERS ARRIVE

All gates on the old middle dam on the Fox river were open for the past two or three days, an indication that flood waters from the Wolf and upper Fox rivers have reached this district. Practically all of the gates on the new dam also were open permitting maximum of sluicage. The Wisconsin-Michigan Power company has continued use of its hydro-electric turbines because of the high water above the dam interfering with the company's tailrace.

NAVIGATION OPEN BUT NO BOATS ARRIVE HERE

Navigation on the Fox river between the Menasha locks and Green Bay was officially opened at 6 o'clock Monday morning. The river and locks are cleared of ice between these two points, according to reports received by A. F. Everett at the United States Engineers office.

Up to 4 o'clock Monday afternoon no boats had passed through the Appleton locks. A tug and barge coming from Kaukauna passed through the Kimberly locks landing at the coal pier at Kimberly.

According to Mr. Everett, navigation on Lake Winnebago will be impossible for at least another week or so. The ice is reported breaking up.

BERRY GROWERS READY TO FORM ORGANIZATION

SMALL INVESTMENT NEEDED FOR START IN POULTRY INDUSTRY

ALL BOYS AND GIRLS OWNING CHICKS MAY DOUBLE THEIR FLOCKS

Hens Act as Incubators and a Little Attention Is All That Is Needed

Madison—(P)—If the hen will sit, set her.

This is the best way to get started in the poultry business according to specialists at the University of Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

The 4-H club, established at the University for the purpose of getting every Wisconsin boy and girl interested in poultry raising, has, through its handbook, "Getting Started in Poultry," made available simple means by which this project may be accomplished.

It does not require a large investment, the book states. The hen can still be the incubator because, "hens hatched chicks before incubators were known."

But it takes more than a hen to hatch chickens, according to the handbook. First a comfortable nest must be prepared and placed where the hen will not be disturbed by the rest of the flock. "Eggs should be chosen from standard breed, uniform in size, in shape and color. Place from 10 to 15 eggs under the hen, according to her size. Be sure she can cover them all."

During the hatching period the hen should be fed whole corn, green feed and an abundance of water.

By allowing the hen to come from the nest a short time every day it gives her a chance to dust herself as a protection against lice and mites, the bulletin points out. It also permits eggs to cool.

The hen, being a reliable source of heat, according to the experts, it saves the newcomer in the poultry field the price of a brooder house. The A shaped coop is recommended because it is cheap, easily constructed, and can be moved without difficulty.

Having housed the flock comfortably and economically the next big problem according to the department is proper feeding. The general rule is to feed sparingly during the day, keeping the hens slightly hungry, then give them all they want at night.

"An egg a day keeps the axe away," the bulletin states. "Cull the hens that cannot produce. This decreases the size of the flock, but increases the average production." In this way specialists say every hen pays for herself.

With uniform size eggs, and chickens coming easily, the marketing according to specialists always pays.

The club department of the University recommends co-operative marketing because this method under proper supervision has proved successful.

Nature Alone Is Not Enough to Insure a Steady Production of Crops

Madison—(P)—Mother earth is not all powerful. She must have the aid of man.

Prof. A. R. Whitson, University of Wisconsin soils specialist, finds many things that man—husbandman—must do to co-operate with the soil to make it "mother" his crops.

Wisconsin now has a climate and yearly rainfall that is advantageous to many crops, and, according to Prof. Whitson, the chief remaining problem is to fit the existing soil with the crops it can best produce.

The principal soil factor that enters into a proper use of the land are the ability of the soil to hold moisture, the chemical composition of the soil, the topography and stoniness of the land.

Soils of fine texture retain moisture better than do coarser soils, and are therefore better suited to crops, such as corn and hay, that require considerable moisture. The coarser soils may well be used, however, for crops that are able to get along with less moisture.

Many soils are unbalanced in chemical composition, needing lime, phosphate, or potash. Most soils are deficient in nitrogen, he finds. Here again, man-made science must come to the aid of nature.

The topography of the land and the amount of stones, found on it will often restrict its use despite its other qualities. Land of more than a slight degree of slope cannot be cultivated, and land of more than 15 per cent slope is not suitable even for pasture, but can be used to best advantage for three crops. Excessively stony land, too, is also unfit for cultivation.

BAD WEATHER INJURES SEED PEANUT CROP

Washington—(P)—Federal authorities warn that immediate steps should be taken to safeguard the supply of seed peanuts for the plantings to be made next spring.

The present emergency is a result of unfavorable weather in parts of the peanut producing sections during the growing season in 1927.

Now of economic importance as a crop, peanuts are depended upon by eastern seaboard growers for much of their farm profits. Price trends this winter and the growing commercial demand for peanuts are likely to stimulate the planting of an increased acreage in 1928.

In Virginia and eastern North Carolina the demand is largely for Bunch and Jumbo seed, while in the south growers want seed of the Spanish and improved Spanish varieties. Farmers who have well matured pumpkins, peanuts free from mold and discoloration are advised to save carefully a supply of seed for their own and their neighbors' use.

In many states the will or testament of an unmarried woman is deemed revoked by her subsequent marriage.

Potatoes For Planting Must Be Cut Properly

Here is a seed potato properly quartered for planting. The "sets" at the left have been cut from the two halves on the right so that the "eyes" are evenly divided, with an equal amount of plant food.

Washington—(P)—After trying for 20 years to find the best end of a potato to plant for seed, the department of agriculture is about convinced that there isn't any.

Dr. William Stuart, federal horticulturist, says each end has proved superior to the other in different tests, and that it is doubtful whether either has definite advantage.

Results have varied to the point of confusion in many cases. One experiment at Norfolk, Va., resulted in a larger yield of prime potatoes when seed was cut from the stem end. Another resulted in a larger yield when seed sets were cut from the apical end, but with the advantage in favor of the basal sets in total yield.

At Presque, Isle, Me., basal sets outyielded apical sets by 15 bushels an acre in the case of prime potatoes, and by 12.2 bushels in total yield. A second test, however, brought a somewhat larger yield of primes from apical sets and a considerable gain in total yield.

"The data as a whole," Dr. Stuart says, "seems to indicate that as the weight of the set increases there is a greater response from seed cut from the apical end of a potato than from the stem end."

"Some growers are so firmly convinced that the seed, or apical end of the tuber is undesirable for seed purposes that they clip it off and discard it. Another group of growers are equally convinced the seed end is superior to the basal or stem end. Some have claimed better results by discarding both ends and planting the middle, and still others prefer to plant the entire potato."

Because the whole potato tends to a relatively large number of shoots and must have plenty of plant food and moisture if the tubers are to attain a desirable size, this practice is confined almost entirely to irrigated sections.

Dr. Stuart sees no advantage in choosing the middle of a potato for seed. He says the farmer who splits his seed potatoes through "eyes" are evenly divided, and then cuts each half in two, correlating the size of the seed with the number of sprouts it is to support, probably follows the safest course.

Failure to arrive at a satisfactory agreement on seed selection is attributed to the varying influences of temperature, moisture, soil conditions and cultural care during certain periods in the growth of the plant. Farmers who will start planting the new potato crop and in each case, Dr. Stuart says, the individual must answer in his own way the question of seed selection for a century and a half has troubled potato growers in this and foreign countries.

Here And There Among The Farmers--

BY W. F. WINSEY

Potato growers in the vicinity of Dale used four cars of commercial fertilizer on the potatoes last year and are planning to use about the same amount this spring. "If I had started the use of commercial fertilizer 12 years ago, I would be living on 'easy street' now," said Arthur Kaufmann, one of these growers. Mr. Kaufmann says that he has tined a number of his fields. He would not think, in view of his experience of planting either corn or potatoes without using commercial fertilizer near the hills. As a result of fertilizer last spring on his corn, he got a yield of 600 bushels of corn from 6 acres.

Mones Eberhard, route 3, Black Creek, who came to the town of Black Creek in 1865 and who has been living in his present location since 1901, says that fields on the lowlands bordering Black Creek that were cleared years ago and produced big crops for years afterwards are abandoned by their owners and are being covered by a growth of underbrush. These fields reached the point where neither grain, hay nor pasture could be raised on them. The cause of the deterioration of these lands is the water from spring freshets and rains that overflowed in the spring and during heavy rainfalls but the surplus water would disappear quickly, the field would soon dry up and the crops would soon recover from the soaking. Now the fields are under water throughout the year.

According to Mr. Eberhard, there has been no increase in precipitation. The cause of the water remaining in the fields through the year is that the channel of Black Creek has been filled with sediment which acts as a dam.

Since January 1, the Outagamie Limestone Company has shipped out over 200 carloads of agricultural limestone. At the height of spring demand 32 carloads were shipped in one week.

Among the counties to which this limestone was shipped are Shawano, Waupaca, Langlade, Portage and Oneida.

Farmers of Outagamie-co are beginning to use ground limestone as a fertilizer for farm crops. Among the biggest users, are Henry Roepcke, Seymour, George Lonkey, Shiocton, Mike Mack, Shiocton, Florence Schmickel, Black Creek, C. J. Van Patten, Black Creek and Guy Daniels, Black Creek.

W. F. Klarner, route 3, Black Creek, says that he never neglects to test the germination of his seed corn before planting time arrives. He raised and cured enough ripe seed corn last summer for his own use this spring. "A farmer is foolish to take the chances of planting seed corn without knowing in advance of planting whether the seed will grow," says Mr. Klarner. As he has not had trouble with smut of rust the past two years, he will not treat his oat or barley seed this spring. He has ordered a fertilizer attachment for his planter and will use a commercial fertilizer on his corn. As a fertilizer for all his crops, Mr. Klarner depends almost entirely upon manure. He is planning to sow 10 acres to oats and 6 acres to barley. He will plant 14 acres of corn and an acre of early cabbage. He has 20 acres of red clover and timothy pasture and 15 acres of alfalfa, red clover and alfalfa for hay. He intends to sow some sweet clover and to try it out as pasture.

Joseph Barth, route 3, Black Creek, is installing a water system in his new modern farm house that he completed two years ago. To get a sufficient supply of water for his house and stables, Mr. Barth dug a new well which he is lining with galvanized iron piping. As a part of the water system, he intends to install pressure tanks in his residence and stables. He intends to put a wall under an old building and to turn the building into a double garage and a tool shed.

Mr. Barth is planning to sow 15 acres to oats, 6 acres to barley and to plant 20 acres of corn and 2 acres of cabbage. He has 22 acres of red clover, alfalfa and timothy hay and 20 acres of the same kind of pasture. He has 14 cows, 12 of which he is now milking, and 21 hogs that he intends to keep for the market and to put on pasture as soon as possible. For fertilizer Mr. Barth depends upon manure. He tested his seed corn before planting. As he had no trouble with smut or rust the past two years, Mr. Barth does not intend to treat his oats and barley this spring.

As he does not believe, on inside fences on his farm he has portable fence for his pasture that he moves as occasion requires.

J. W. Welland, 1612 West Eighth-st., Appleton, has declared his intention of experimenting with the under-paper kind of gardening this summer. Instead of buying new asphalt paper, Mr. Welland expects to use second-hand paper roofing in his experiment.

SMALL EXPENSE WILL INSURE GOOD CROPS, SEED EXPERTS CLAIM

State College Men Urge Formaldehyde Treatment to Stamp Out Smut

Madison—(P)—The approach of spring seeding time brings with it the question of seed treatment. Particularly in this true of oats seed, says R. E. Vaughan, plant disease specialist at the Wisconsin college of Agriculture, who urges that all farmers who had smut in their oats last year subject their seed to treatment this spring.

Formaldehyde has proved the most satisfactory treatment for oats during the past 30 years, he declares. A good treating solution may be made up of one pound of formaldehyde to 45 to 40 gallons of water of about a gallon to the bushel while it is being shoveled from one pile to another on a barn floor, or wagon box.

After the seed is sprinkled, it should be covered for two or three hours with sacks or blankets, then raked open to dry a little so the grain will run freely in the reeder.

Treated grain is a little swollen so that the seeder should be set to deliver one or two pecks more to the acre than when seeding untreated grain, and it should be seeded within 24 hours after treatment to prevent injury to the grain by mold.

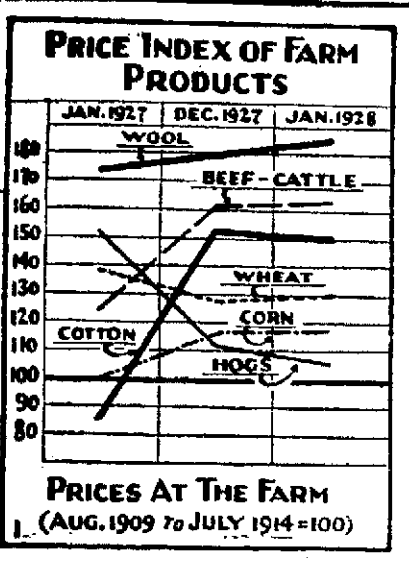

Another method of applying formaldehyde is the dry or cornell method, in which a 50-50 solution is sprayed onto the grain as it is being shoveled from pile to pile. The pile should be covered the same as in the sprinkling method. It is then ready to seed at once, and not enough water has been added to cause swelling. Another method is to make a solution and dip oats into it about three to five minutes, then cover and dry.

When barley or wheat is troubled with loose smut, a disease that leaves the rachis bare, when even the awns and glumes, and all the seed, are consumed by smut, the best way is to obtain clean seed and start anew, Mr. Vaughan says.

Loose smuts are caused by fungi that work down through the blossom parts into the interior of the seed, and cannot be reached by surface treatment. They can be controlled by hot water treatment, 120 degrees F. for 10 minutes, but it is a slow job and applicable only on small lots of grain. It is entirely feasible, however, and your county agent or the college will be glad to help with the details.

The copper carbonate treatment has been used extensively in recent years in treating wheat for the control of bunt or smut, he said. It is not applicable for treating the hulled grains like oats and barley because the disinfectant cannot get to the germs of smut hidden in the groove of the hulls. For bunt control, he suggested mixing the new ounces of copper carbonate dust and mixing it with a bushel of wheat in a tight container like an old barrel churn, and mixing thoroughly for three or four minutes. If well mixed, every kernel will be coated with the blue powder. This acts as a protection to the young sprouts as they leave the kernels. The copper carbonate kills the fungus in the vicinity of the young sprouts and later the older sprouts have such a thick skin that the fungus cannot get in. The cost of treatment is very low, only a few cents a bushel.

FARM PRICES SHOW SOME IMPROVEMENT IN PRESENT INDEX

Washington—(P)—Four major farm products, cotton, corn, beef, cattle and wool—are shown by the department of agriculture's latest price index to have been in better position at the beginning of the present year than they were on Jan. 1, 1927.

With the exception of cotton, which dropped one point, all four of the major products showed gains over December of last year or went into 1928 on their December basis.

Wheat and hogs showed declines, the latter dropping from 132 points in January, 1927, to 108 for the same month this year.

The general upward trend in the farm price of wool, the department says, has been influenced by an improvement in the wool textile manufacturing industry. Increased pur-

UNDER PAPER GARDENS GIVE LARGER YIELDS

System Has Been Used in the South and West With Wonderful Success

BY W. F. WINSEY

If even a small fraction of the big yield, no-work statements of experts, gardeners and growers of field crops about the under-paper method of growing crops and vegetables are true, a large number of the small gardeners of the cities of Wisconsin will soon be experimenting with the new method.

Most of these big statements come from Hawaii where sugar cane, pineapples and other crops have been grown for years by the under-paper method, from California where the method has been successfully tried out, from the southern states and from experiment stations of the east. One and all of statements agree in three particulars that give the new method the most welcome kind of an introduction to the public. One of these particulars is that the new kind of gardening requires absolutely no work until harvesting time after the planting is done.

Chase of domestic wool and stronger foreign prices. The slight advance in the farm price of corn was due entirely to an increase from 75.5 cents to 82.8 cents in the south central states. Movement of wheat to market during January was slightly heavier than for the same month last year.

Cotton, which had dropped to 12.5 in the index, made a sensational gain in the year from 85 to 151, approached only by the jump from 124 to 163 by beef cattle.

One of the most noticeable downward trends appears in the price index of hogs, which topped from 132 in January, but went to 122 in December and then went on down to 108 in January, 1928.

The general upward trend in the farm price of wool, the department says, has been influenced by an improvement in the wool textile manufacturing industry. Increased pur-

CHEAP LAND IN MEXICO ATTRACTS U. S. RANCHERS

Del Rio, Tex.—(P)—More cattle, sheep and goats from Texas ranches are crossing the Rio Grande, to augment the livestock industry in Mexico.

Two reasons are given for the movement of the animals, which ride ferries, walk over bridges or swim the river into the Latin republic. The first is the trend in Mexico to restock ranches with purebred or high grade herds and flocks. The other reason is the cheapness of land attracting American ranchmen.

Despite strict Mexican laws limiting the exportation of heifers and ewe lambs, Americans are entering the livestock business in the country because cheap land makes low production cost possible. These large grazing lands there for 10 cents an acre, while in Texas they must pay 65 cents or more. Taxes on livestock also are lower than in the United States.

Help Your Cattle to Resist Disease

Agricultural colleges and experiment stations concede that common breeding ailments of cattle, such as sinking calves, barrenness, failure to clean, goitre and scours in calves and shortage of milk are incident to a germ disease.

Modern Methods

of feeding, feeding and forcing for milk and butter production are practiced at a sacrifice of breeding vitality. Cattle are more susceptible to infection and the germs of diseases such as Tuberculosis and Contagious Abortion.

Prevention Better Than a Cure

It is easier and cheaper. If your cattle are subject to any of these ailments, and you are not doing their best, it is because there is something lacking. It is now possible for you to overcome these ailments. You can build up the breeding vitality of your herd. You can make your cattle healthy, fertile and productive. Dr. David Roberts.

BLOOD-TONIK is especially prepared to treat the breeding vitality of cattle. Used regularly and you will find the improved condition of your herd and the increased number of calves as well as in the quantity of your milk supply. If your cattle does not have this tonic, order their Price 25c per bottle.

LITTLE CHANGE IN WISCONSIN MARKETS

Cattle Prices Higher Than Last Year but Hog Prices Are Lower

Madison—(P)—Market conditions were quiet during the past week, according to the weekly review of the department of markets.

Business was quiet in cheese with buyers operating on a hand-to-mouth basis. Weather conditions seem to favor production. Prices were 2 1/2 cents higher than last year at this time.

It is reported that the outstanding feature of the hog market during the past week was the unusual stability of values, the average price fluctuating within less than a 5 cent spread for the entire period. As compared with the past week better grade hogs are steady to 10 cents higher. Hog prices are about $1.05 lower than last year at this time.

Cattle prices are about $2.05 higher than last year at this time and sheep prices are the same.

There were liberal offerings of butter on the higher and medium grades, absence of demand and sharp price declines featured the butter market throughout the week. Cheap butter was in light supply but as there was no demand trade was dull. Undertone was very nervous and unsettled. At the close of the week a firmer tone developed due to the firmness and advance of the March future option. Buyers, however, showed very little interest and were apparently holding off until the close of the March future option. Car market trading was dull. Butter prices are about 7 cents higher than last year at this time.

U. S. FORESTS IMENSE

Digging for Oil

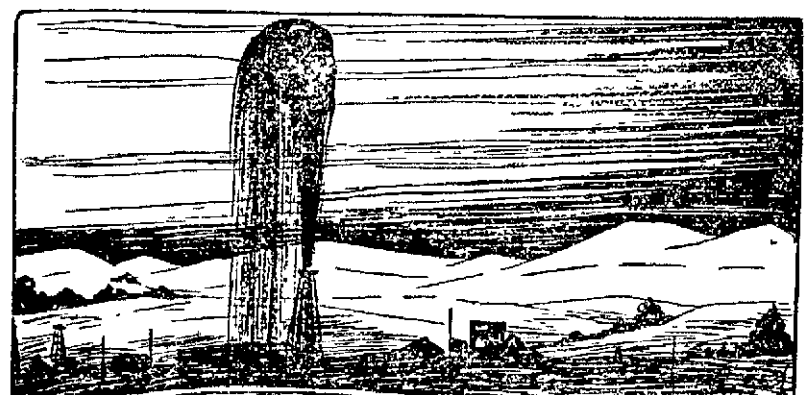

In the days when wells were drilled for salt water it was found that by exploding powder at the bottom of the well sometimes more brine could be obtained. The same experiment was tried with oil wells and was found often successful. Here we see men pouring nitroglycerine into a cylinder which is carefully let down to the bottom of the well and exploded by dropping a weight.

When digging for coal a great hole has to be dug. Oil drillers, however run a tiny hole down into the grimy depths.

A great wooden pyramid called a derrick is erected, 60 to 100 feet high, to support the machinery necessary for drilling.

The bit works like the familiar carpenter's tool, biting its way through the rock. The hole made by the bit is lined with iron pipe from the surface to the porous layer containing the oil. Here a gusher is shown just after it was brought in. It is the famous Lakeview Gusher of California that shot up 300 feet into the air.

SYRIAN MISSIONARY VISITS NEW LONDON

Detroit Author and Publisher Is One of Foremost Workers on Continent

Special to Post-Crescent
 New London—Meeting with the little group of aliens who left the mountains and valleys of their native Syria to move to New London to rear their families and maintain their faith, the Rev. Amr Bashir, general missionary to the unchurched Orthodox Syrians in this country has for several days been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Simon, Waupaca.
 Though but thirty years of age, his literary accomplishments are tremendous. His translations of many of the world's masterpieces, among which are numbered many of American modern writers, have done much to bring standard literature before the people of his race. More than a half hundred books are counted, among which are the works of Bruce Barton, Dr. Frank Crane, Pappin, Havelock Ellis, Tolstoy, Maeterlinck, and the works of numerous poets and philosophers of the day. He is publisher of a newspaper, "Liberty," which appears twice a week, and a literary magazine, "The Immortals," both published at Detroit, his headquarters.
 He was born in sight of the old cedars of Lebanon, which today remain standing after thousands of years, sister trees to those cut for the building of Solomon's temple of Biblical times.
 "Syria! The most beautiful country in the world, but I never will return," he states. "Perhaps to visit, or to aid my people, but never to remain."
 Freedom of thought and speech! You do not know the meaning of the words, for you have lived having both always. To be able to speak freely, to have the advantages of American schools. These are wonderful things.
 Asked how, with so much missionary work calling for almost constant travel, he can give so much time to literature, the Rev. Bashir stated that he has learned to find a place for every moment of the twenty four hours of the day. "I write everywhere—in hotels, trains, homes. Work is the greatest happiness that life can hold," he decided.
 In speaking of his education, Rev. Bashir stated that he finished his course at the Union Seminary of Chicago at the age of 17, too young to be graduated. He received legal training at the American University at Beirut, Syria, and taught Arabic until 1922 when he attended, as delegate, the conference of faith and order at Geneva, Switzerland. He came to America in the same year. His work now is keeping alive interest in small communities, and helping to establish churches for his people.
 Mr. and Mrs. Simon entertained at dinner on Sunday having the Rev. F. S. Dayton as another guest. The Rev. Dayton cooperated with the Syrian congregation, whose religious creeds and forms are greatly similar to those of the Episcopalian faith.

Prizes in scholarship were captured by Louis Abraham who held high score and Louis Sofia second high. In skat, Herman Ludwig held high score, Leo Tuyls second high and Elmer Meidam third high.

 ABANDON PLAN FOR UNIVERSITY BAND
 Special to Post-Crescent
 New London—Due to the fact that no date was available except a Saturday evening the concert date for the University of Wisconsin band has been abandoned. E. L. Reuter, in speaking of the band, stated that this was the only date which could be arranged, since an earlier date in the week would keep the students absent from their studies at the University for too long. Reuter, as men interested felt that Saturday would be entirely unprofitable for concert date and for that reason the matter has been dropped.
 More than 37 million packs of cards were sold in the United States last year.

SUPERIOR TO VOTE ON GOVERNING FORM

Supreme Court Decision Forces Mayor to Call Special Election

Madison—(P)—In a decision which has the effect of ordering Mayor Baxter to call a special election on the form of city government, the state supreme court Monday made a major decision on the "home rule" amendment, declaring that it "imposes no limitations upon the power of the legislature."

Mayor Baxter in his brief contended that the law granting special powers to the city to elect to change its form of government, say to a commission form, was an "option" law. He also contended that the home rule amendment was optional, so that the first law was an option within an option and therefore "unconstitutional."

The supreme court does not construe the grant of a commission form of government as an option law. It simply conferred an additional power on the city, as did also the home rule amendment, the court ruled.

"If the legislature may pass a law prescribing a commission form of government it may also make changes in that form of government and make its operation dependent upon adoption by the city," the decision said.

"The power of legislature to legislate for cities has not been limited but where legislation by cities enacted under the home rule power comes in conflict with state legislation, the legislation of the state prevails unless the state legislation affects uniformly every city of the state. The home rule amendment imposes no limitations upon the power of the legislature. Legislation existing at the time of its adoption is in effect. The power of the legislature to legislate in the future as it has in the past, is not limited."

The election sought by Sleeman was to be held for the purpose of voting on the question of increasing the number of members on the city council. The Mayor had previously refused to call such election, and he appealed the circuit court's order instructing him to call one.

The power of legislature to legislate for cities has not been limited but where legislation by cities enacted under the home rule power comes in conflict with state legislation, the legislation of the state prevails unless the state legislation affects uniformly every city of the state. The home rule amendment imposes no limitations upon the power of the legislature. Legislation existing at the time of its adoption is in effect. The power of the legislature to legislate in the future as it has in the past, is not limited."

A low pressure area has crossed the lake region during the past 24 hours, attended by mild temperatures, but it has caused few showers. Rising pressure from the northwest, with a promise of cooler weather tonight. Low pressure is reported over the Rockies, with cloudiness eastward over the plains states and Mississippi valley, and it is expected this will extend some influence to this section, causing some cloudiness tonight and Wednesday.

GOLFERS TEE OFF OF MOUNTAIN TOP

Players Can See Into Four States as They Make Drives on This Course

Chattanooga, Tenn.—(P)—On Lookout Mountain, where armies battled in the Civil war, there has been built a golf course from which players can see into four states as they follow their drives over high and adventurous topography.

It is known as "Fairland." Its hazards are large boulders and deep ravines, its tees are lofty rock pedestals and its greens small elevations. The course was designed as the last work of the late Seth J. Raynor, golf architect, who considered it his masterpiece.

Each hole is modeled after a famous hole of some noted course elsewhere. The second is much like the ninth at Piping Rock; number four is similar to six at the National; the ninth resembles the "Alps Hole" at Prestwick, Scotland; the eleventh is laid out like the Rodan hole in North Berwick, Scotland, and number twelve is modeled after the sixth at Lido.

From the seventeenth hole a player can view picturesque scenery stretching over the Tennessee valley into Georgia, and on into the mountains of North and South Carolina. The tee on number four is established upon a rock standing 20 feet above the level of the fairway.

The average height of the course is 300 feet above the valley, while immediately to the rear the mountain rises 600 feet higher. With a length of 6,640 yards, the course has a par of 70-35-35. Most of the fairways are cut through dense woods and are of ample width.

Even with fairways wide, the erratic driver is in trouble for his ball may go out of bounds over a cliff to a permanent resting place several hundred feet below, or may land in a rocky rough that is rough in the fullest meaning of the word.

John D. Rockefeller, distributor of dimes, had the tables turned on him by Will Rogers, humorist, when our photographer overtook them making the rounds of the Grand Beach, Fla., golf course. "Have a dime on me," said Will, producing a shining new ten-cent piece which was promptly accepted. "But don't spend it all at once!"

HEAVY VOTE CAST IN APPLETON TODAY

party is the latest chapter in a 20-year battle for control in Wisconsin. For 20 years the progressives have controlled the delegations to the national convention of the party to which it recognizes no allegiance. Four years ago the progressives commanded 23 of the 29 votes, Thomas Scott of Kenosha, now dead being the lone Republican from Wisconsin to vote for Coolidge.

Many issues, some of them that have figured in campaigns for years were injected into the Republican fight. In an eight weeks campaign Teapot Dome and revelations Republican campaign contributions have been the subject of prolonged attack by the progressives, while the Republicans have made much of progressive support of Senator Norris, they have charged the progressives with inconsistency in supporting the Nebraska champion of the world court and an ardent dry.

Settlement of a feud between two factions of Smith men will be decided in district delegate contest. Walsh is seeking only the four district delegates. The Governor of New York is expected to lead in district contests. One faction is led by John M. Callahan, national committeeman. The opposing slate was sponsored by a state conference in which John Martin, Green Bay, former national committeeman, and Mrs. Gertrude Bowler national committeewoman, took a prominent part.

Mrs. Edward Graper, Appleton, route 7, has gone to Chicago for a few weeks visit with relatives and friends in Chicago.

OLD VIRGINIA LAW KEEPS RIVER BEDS PROPERTY OF STATE

Aged Statute Brought Into Use When Wolf River Case
Is Involved

When the state of Virginia specifically stated, at the time of entering the union, that the beds of streams remain state property, it started something which to this day is causing much court action and provides grounds for many an argument.

The latest case to effect Wisconsin's recognition by the federal power commission of the contention of the Wisconsin railroad commission that the federal commission could not issue a license for the construction of a dam in Wisconsin for power purposes. The case in question referred to the power project on the Wolf river at Shawano.

The full meaning of the decision was explained at a recent meeting of the Wisconsin Bar association when Adolph Kanneberg, railroad commissioner, read a paper on Federal Encroachment of State Rights.

Mr. Kanneberg said that other states had followed the lead taken by Virginia and that title to land under lakes, ponds and navigable rivers was never held by the United States except in trust for public purposes.

In pointing out that the power rested with a legislature to prevent, for all times, dams at the Indian reservation by legislative enactment, the commissioner says he did not intend to suggest legislative action, but simply to point out that the legislature has the power to foreclose the situation, if it so desires.

The fact that the United States might own the land as riparian owner makes no difference, according to Mr. Kanneberg, and the federal government had only those rights that any person would have in the ownership of property. The federal government's control of navigable water rests entirely on its right of control of navigation under its powers as to the control of interstate commerce.

The license which the federal government issued for the Shawano dam was issued on the ground of creating power alone and made no mention, according to Mr. Kanneberg, of any improvement of navigation. Even had it done so, he said, the Wisconsin railroad commission would have challenged the license on the grounds that the facts did not show any improvement of navigation and that no attempt had ever been made by the government to improve the Wolf river for navigation purposes.

MUD SPLASHED GERMANS PROTEST TO OFFICIALS

Berlin—(AP)—Berlin pedestrians are tired of having their shoes, trousers or skirts bespattered by automobiles. They have appealed to the chief of police for relief.

The police is now experimenting with mudguards of a type successfully used in Japan and there made obligatory by law. These mud guards are affixed to the hubs of the wheels and encase them on their outer lower halves.

In a city like Berlin, where there is much rain and where the autos are allowed to drive by a stopping street car or omnibus, the nuisance of mud splattering is a trying one. If the chief of police finds the Japanese mud guards serviceable, he can prescribe them for Berlin automobiles by a simple ordinance.

A Raw, Sore Throat

Eases quickly when you apply a little Muterole. It penetrates to the sore spot with a gentle tingle, loosens the congestion and draws out the soreness and pain and won't blister like the old-fashioned mustard plaster.

Muterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. Brings quick relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frost-bitten feet, colds on the chest.

For Mothers: Muterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Muterole.

MEDITATION: In a recent number of the Atlantic Monthly there is an article called "The Brink." A group of climbers found themselves as darkness fell in a very dangerous situation where they could apparently neither advance nor retreat. A mother in the company occupied herself during part of the time of waiting in writing to her son. "I know you would be praying, boy, if you knew. Because, Billy, there has to be a God. We mortals are too weak in physical and moral and spiritual strength to cope with this." Religion gives us the sense of Another and a Greater to whom we can flee and from whom we may expect aid. This keeps one from ever feeling utterly hopeless.

"Let us learn like a bird for a moment to take "Sweet rest on a branch that is ready to break.
"She feels the branch tremble yet gaily she sings.
"What is it to her, she has wings. She has wings!" —Hugo.

SEVENTY YEARS OF AGE: GETS DOCTOR'S DEGREE

Berlin—(AP)—Seventy years was not considered too old by Paul Kueppers, former editor-in-chief of the "Bochumer Anzeiger," to go to college and pass a doctor's examination.

Daily he traveled from Bochum to the nearby university town of Muenster, where he attended graduate courses in political science. Like any other graduate student the old editor wrote a thesis, entitled, "Bochum's Work in the War, 1914-1918," then took and passed the regular examination. He was awarded the degree of "doctor der Staatswissenschaften."

His new doctor is a member of the city council of Bochum and a leader in the German People's Party.

slumber nor sleep and who giveth. Thine angels charge over us to keep us in all ways, send out Thy light and Thy truth, and help us so to live in reliance on Thee that even the night shall be light about us. Amen.

No Respectable Dog Would Choose Names Like These

Although there are more than 800 dogs in the city of Appleton and probably 500 of them have different names, the majority of the remaining 300 will answer to then ame of "Pal" according to the records of the city treasurer who issues dog license tags. Rex also is a favorite name for the family pup with Feggy and Jiggs running next in favor.

One thing is noticeable about the names of the city's dog—the dogs certainly never had anything to say about their names. The records show that a certain Alredale must answer to the call "Gossyp" while another probably comes running when his master or mistress calls "Wilson." There are a couple of Boston Bull pups that probably revel in their monicker of Dempsey, an' laugh at their brother who must answer to the name Roderick.

Among the more or less odd names which people attach to their dogs are Pickles, Chertie, Honz Yen, Wu Chung, Troubles, Sergeant, Cappy, Trucks, Kelly, Rastus, Casino, Bell, Bums, Reba, Buzz, Bond, Zero, Tot-ties, Fudge, Val, Von, Pandora, Freckles, Junior, Mitzi, Colonel Boy, Honey, Badger, Major, Dixie, Beaut, Buttons, Zorro, Turk, Pan, Snowdie, Ford and Hoot Mon.

BLESSING OF NETS REVIVED

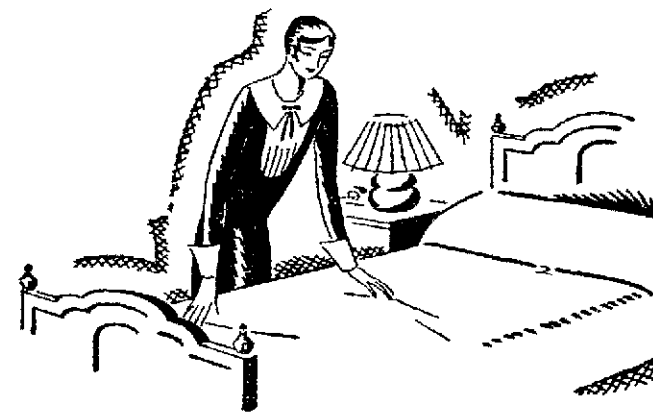

After a lapse of a century, "blessing the nets," an ancient custom, was revived at the opening of the present salmon fishing season on the River

Lee Ireland. The ceremony was held at Blackrock, where many of the fisherfolk reside. A fleet of 34 boats, each manned with a crew of four, assembled at the pierhead, where a crowd had gathered. The service included a reading from the Gospel of St. John, which tells of the blessing of the nets in the Sea of Galilee.
